CONSTITUENCIES LARGE AND SMALL

The belated issue of the White Paper giving figures of the new electorate settles finally a question about which there has been much friendly argument at Westminster.

The members of the House of Commons who represents the largest electorate is Mr. E. Manville, who sits for Coventry. He is accountable to 66,066 voters, a large total than that for several of the undivided boroughs which returns two members.

The largest London borough constituency is Deptford with 51,611 voters and the smallest South-West Bethnal Green, with 19,510. The smallest constituency in Great Britain is that named the Western Isles with 18,321 voters.

But you have to go to Ireland again to find the smallest constituency entitled to be represented by a member in the House of Commons. Kilkenny, with 1,670 voters, used to have that distinction. Now it is West Wicklow, with 11,673. But the smallest constituency is not yet represented at Westminster—it returned a Sir Feiner in December.

HOW A CRAB GROWS

The crab's equivalent to the internal bones of animals is its tough outer shell, which does not grow. The baby crab is forced to get rid of this tough confining prison. So it breaks itself loose internally and then splits its old protecting home across the extreme back ridge, creeping out in that way. It is, naturally, a very delicate operation to withdraw the terrible claws and other limbs, as these are bigger at the extreme end. Indeed, it seems at first sight impossible, but these curious creatures have the power of withdrawing the blood into the body, and this greatly reduces the bulk of the appendages.

When Mr. Crab has thus escaped from his old shell, he is quite soft and forms a dainty meal for his enemies; his pincers, too, are useless, so while his new outer shell is hardening, he has to hide in some cranny in the rocks.

This new shell would obviously be the same size as (or even a trifle smaller than) the old Mr. Crab merely kept quiet, as he is quite unable to "grow" when once the shell has hardened. To overcome this difficulty he swells himself out by absorbing as much water as possible, and remains in this artificially distended condition till the new shell hardens; then he at once gets rid of the useful water and leaves himself plenty of room for growth.

The young crab changes its shell in this way about twenty times during the first three years of its life.

NEVER GIVE UP!

Never give up! It is wiser and better Always to hope than once to despair. Fling off the load of Doubt's cankered fetter.
And break the dark spell of tyrannical Care.
Never give up! Or the burden may sink you.
Providence kindly has mingled the cup.
And in all trials or troubles, bethink you.
The watchword of life must be, "Never give up!"

Never give up! There are chances and changes
Helping the hopeful a hundred to one.
And through the chaos High Wisdom arranges
Ever success—if you'll only hope on!
Never give up! For the wisest is boldest.
Knowing that Providence mingles the cup.
And of all maxims the best, as the oldest.
Is the true watchword of "Never give up!"

Never give up! though the shrapnel may rattle.
Or the full thundercloud over you burst.
Stand like a rock—and the storm on the battle
Little shall harm you, though doing their worst.
Never give up! If adversity presses,
Providence wisely has mingled the cup.
And the best counsel in all your distresses.
Is the stout watchword of "Never give up!"

A clergyman was taking the air at Brighton. He noticed a young man passing and repressing him. The youth always smiled. Finally he said to the clergyman: "How do you do?"
"Very well indeed," replied the clergyman.
"Oh, I knew you at once," said the young man. "You are George Robey, and I saw you at the theatre last night."

U-Boat Escapes

LONDON, June 28.—The German submarine destroyer U-21 arrived at Gotenhafen yesterday, after having fled from Kell. The commander and fourteen sailors were on board, of whom seven say they intend to go to South America.

LONDON, June 28.—William P. Schriener, Premier of Cape Colony from 1898 to 1900, and former High Commissioner for South Africa in England, died in London to-day.

R-34 Expected in United States this Week

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 28.—The British dirigible R-34 is expected to arrive in the United States on July fifth or sixth on the first flight across the Atlantic to be undertaken by a lighter than air craft. This announcement was made here to-day by the British Air Attache, who requested that American merchant ships on the north Atlantic to radio weather reports to Cape Race for both the outward and return voyage of the dirigible. The R-34 will land at Long Island and will remain only long enough to replenish its fuel and supplies.

PARIS, June 28.—Final notification to Germany that the blockade will not be raised until Treaty is ratified by Germany, is the form of resolution adopted by the Council of Four, and presented to the German delegation before its departure for Berlin.

BREST, June 29.—Wilson sailed from Brest today on his return to the United States. Departure of the President from soil of France caused scarcely a ripple on life of this port.

LONDON, June 29.—Relief, gratification and hope for a speedy readjustment of the world are varied in the editorials published by all morning newspapers on the signing of the Treaty of Peace. Several newspapers mingle thanksgiving with warnings that there must be no relaxing of effort to make League of Nations effective.

BASLE, June 29.—Negotiations have been opened between Berlin and Moscow Government.

ROMANCE OF A DRAPER

More than the usual romance of industry is revealed by the will Mr. Wooland, a London draper who left a fortune of £320,000.

A Devonshire man, he came to London to be an architect, and joined the firm of Messrs. Florence. Soon, however he became interested in a comparatively small drapery business at Knightsbridge, and his vigorous enterprise had an almost immediate effect. From a small draper's establishment it blossomed out to a centre of fashion, where queens and princesses were attracted as customers.

After the success of the business was established, Mr. Wooland purchased the Marriage Hill Estate in Rainsbury, Lambourne, and Baydon, including the ancient Manor of Baydon, of which he was lord at the time of his death. Altogether he owned some 3,000 acres.

Business did not become a pre-occupation with him; he was an all-round sportsman, being an excellent shot, a keen follower of the Craven hounds, a golfer, a strong supporter of cricket, and a breeder of field spaniels. In the last named he obtained most of the leading prizes both on the show bench and in the field.

MILLINER'S GORILLA

A strange pet is that kept in a London hat-shop. It is a gorilla, rejoicing in the name of John Daniel and belonging to the soldier nephew of the owner, who is trying to find how much brain power this "baby of the woods" has, and to what extent it can be developed.

At present the gorilla, which about four years and eight months old, is a little smaller than a child of that age, and it will grow until it is about five feet eight inches at the age of eighteen or twenty years.

John's mother was shot by a French officer in French Gaboon. Gorillas are only found eighteen miles each of the equator, and the baby, then only a day old, was captured and, reports says, brought up by a negress.

Now John dwells in a cage-room behind a Sloane Street shop, under the most sanitary condition, when it is not walking about among the hats. It is astonishingly tame, and if you pick it up insists upon twining its arms around your neck.

Its diet is a rather costly affair, for it consumes bananas, oranges, pineapples, dates, and raisins.

Do you want to tell the Fishermen what you have for sale? Well then, put your ad in THE FISHERMEN'S PAPER.

BLIND HORSES

The manner in which blind horses get about without coming to more harm than they do is remarkable. They rarely, if ever, hit their heads against a fence or stone wall, and will sheer off when they come near one. It appears from careful observation that it is neither shade nor shelter which warns them out of danger. On an absolutely sunless and windless day their behaviour is the same. Their olfactory nerves doubtless become very sensitive, for they will poke their heads downwards in search of water fifty yards before they come to a stream crossing the roadway.

It cannot be an abnormally developed sense of hearing which leads them to do this, for they will act like though the water be a stagnant pool. Men who have been blind for any great length of time develop somewhat similar instincts to blind horses.

RANDOM REMARKS

"There is no more waste than unemployment."—Mr. Lloyd George.

I advise girls to marry sailors, for I know of no better husbands in the world."—Admiral Beatty.

"Days are not steps in a treadmill—they are steps that go somewhere. Are you going, or just stepping?"—Charlotte P. Gilman.

"The old methods of meeting unemployment by stone-breaking, soup-kitchens, and doles will no longer satisfy the working-classes."—Mr. Neil McLean, M.P.

"Friendship is based not merely upon affection, but upon common service. The man is not your friend who is not willing to serve you, and you are not his friend unless you are willing to serve him."—President Wilson.

"I cannot understand why the clergy trouble themselves exclusively about the soul. It would be well if they would allow medical officers of health and social workers to occupy the pulpit sometimes."—Dr. Moore.

18 Months of Suffering

Catalina,
April 24, 1919.

Mr. Gerald S. Doyle,
St. John's.

Dear Sir,—

As I was a suffered from Indigestion for 18 months, I would like to write a few words to tell how KI-MOIDS cured me.

I tried $15.00 worth of medicines, which did me no good. When I heard of KI-MOIDS, I tried a bottle, and after using it found it didn't do me much good, and condemned it.

However, I used a second bottle and felt a little better. I continued on, and used six bottles, and I can truthfully say that I am completely cured.

I shall be glad if you will publish this, and use my name.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) BOYD GOODYEAR,
Catalina.
