cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable
Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately nd radically.

The respective processes are different, and the trade in each product has its own peculiar features; hence the conditions of improvement are not in both cases the same. There is to the former cause, but a little re both cases the same. There is enough in common, however, in the two processos of cheese-making and butter-making, and the trade in one product is enough like the trade in the other product, to make reform in one case suggestive of means or reform in the other. The improvement in the cheese industry was properly in the cheese industry was proved in the common or construction. Myself, etc.
