GENERAL ELECTION IN P. E. ISLAND.—BIGOTRY STAMPED OUT.

[From a Special Correspondent.]

The history of British America for the last few years records few events which so clearly prove the utility of the use of no stronger term) of appeal to the higher dignity for party purposes, as the result of the General Election which has lately taken place in P. E. Island. The Government which was so signally defeated on the 26th ult., got into power, eight years ago, as a result of the election, by stirring up sectarian strife, and at the succeeding elections obtained the popular verdict through the same unshaken means. The very large proportion of the people who were deceived, on both occasions, by the clap-net of "Protestantism in Danger," have lately, we are happy to say, completely righted themselves, and the result is a complete triumph for the Opposition, or Liberal Party. Districts which, four years ago, elected Government men, now return Liberals to Parliament; whilst many of the M.P.'s, who, at that time, headed the anti-Catholic crusade, had presence enough not to face their constituencies at all! So complete a stamping out of bigotry, in so short a time, we have occasion to witness, and we sincerely congratulate our Canadian neighbors on the auspicious event. It will not be so long before the leading men in particular, on the important question of the Confederation, will be obliged to speak with respect to the P. E. Island matter, and the result will be a complete triumph for the Opposition, or Liberal Party. ### THE FALMOUTH, (MAINE), TRAGEDY.

The telegraph has announced the murder of George Rolfe at Falmouth, Maine, by a weak-minded person named Ebenezer F. Williams, on Sunday last. The Portland Argus gives the following particulars of the fearful tragedy: "It seems that Williams, who is a minor, has been for some time laboring under a morbid and morose disposition. He lived here until the time of the great fire, when his disease was aggravated by losses sustained in that memorable conflagration. After that event he went to Falmouth, and resided with his uncle, Mr. John Williams, until several weeks since, when (though worth some $25,000), he declared he must economize and make up his mind to live by the fire. Accordingly, he went to live alone, in an old building or shanty of his near the old wood pulling shop in Falmouth. There he lived peacefully enough (though he kept fire-arms to protect himself from robbers, he said), except that one day he raised a rifle to his uncle who had come up to see him, had warned him relative off. He was not regarded as dangerous, however. Some two weeks ago, Ebenezer sent for a man named George Rolfe to come up and stay with him, which Rolfe did, saving the wood, cooking, &c. Nothing further of note transpired until Sunday morning last, when the report of a gun from the vicinity of the shanty was heard. The neighbors conjectured that something was wrong, but dare not go near lest they should be fired upon. About midnight, Williams appeared at his uncle's house with the horrible statement that he had killed George, and that, as he had talked afterwards, he had put it in a dish, but that the head was still talking. The madman was not credited at first, but finally he was secured and carried to the old house where he was found in a state of mania. The headless corpse of Rolfe was laid out upon a buffalo robe in the front room, arrayed in a full suit of new and clean clothes, which Williams had evidently put upon it after cutting off the head, as there was no blood upon the garments. The head was found in a pail of water, the eyes open and lips parted, and presenting a terribly ghastly spectacle. Williams evidently had been busy with the body all day, washing it, dressing it, etc., as if to prepare for burial. The axe with which the head was cut off was found, clotted with blood and hair. On examination of the body a bullet hole was found in the left breast, just over the heart. The ball passed downward diagonally, through the back of the neck, and in which the deceased was sitting, and into the side of the house. The appearance of the chair leads to the belief that the three shots were fired or three cartridges used; but the body shows but two wounds. Evidently the murderer had mounted a chair and fired downward at his victim. The metallic cartridges were also found on the floor. The deed was committed with a breach-loading rifle, which the murderer had constantly by him, and was in the habit of keeping loaded. Another gun, loaded and capped, was found in the room. Rolfe, the victim of this tragedy, was a simple minded man, single, and from 35 to 40 years of age. He was, or had been a paper upon this city. Coroner Charles H. Hall, of this city, was sent for and promptly proceeded to Falmouth and empaneled a jury. After the examination of several witnesses the jury returned a verdict that Rolfe came to his death by being shot through the body in two places, the heart and the lungs, by a man named Ebenezer F. Williams, a carbin in the hands of Ebenezer F. Williams, and the evidence tends to show that said guardian, William Williams, contrivable in not taking immediate charge of his ward when notified of his insanity. At the time Eben. left the house of his uncle, and took possession of the old house, notice was given his guardian Mr. William Williams of this city, that his ward was insane and must be taken care of. But it appears, according to the testimony of Mr. John Williams, that no notice was taken of it, and Eben was allowed to remain in the hotel, which was not furnished in any decent manner.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.

The renewal of the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act was a measure which took very few persons in this country by surprise; for, if we had no other experience than that of the past two years, we have learned sufficient within that brief space of time to convince us that the constitution, the palladium of liberty, &c., which in England has some reality, is in Ireland a mockery and a sham. Where it is possible to deliver over a whole people to the government of police and country potlous there can be no freedom. That is the position of Ireland at this present time. The police and the magistrates have their will of the country—the one class actuated by a desire for promotion, and the other by fear, or malignity, or probably both. Those who live in large towns can form no adequate idea of the oppression to which persons in country districts are subjected by the undue authority at present vested in magistrates and policemen. The detectives in the cities, to whom Fenianism has
