is the best source of body-warmth. It's the match that starts the regular fuel burning.

Just a little improves the appetite; a little more warms, builds up and strengthens the whole body.

Thousands and thousands of little babies, boys and girls, men and women, are taking it to keep out the cold, to keep up the body-warmth and to keep the doors closed against Grippe, Pneumonia, Rheumatism and Consumption.

It contains no alcohol, no drug or other harmful ingredient; it is known the world over by the mark of quality—The Fisherman.

THE PUZZLE.

"GENTLEMAN," he said, "an officer, is at the door, who wishes to see a Miss Maria Emsbury, formerly of Swinton."

"I stared at the man, discerned a strange expression in his face, and glanced across me at the same moment that I had heard no knock at the door.

"See, Miss Emsbury," exclaimed the Widow Thorneycroft, recovering her speech—"there is no such person here!"

"Pardon me, madam," I cried, catching eagerly at the interruption, as a drowning man is said to catch at a straw—"this young person was at least Miss Emsbury. Desire the officer to walk up!" The butler banished instantly, and we all huddled back disorderly into the drawing-room, some one closed the door after us. I felt the grasp of Mrs. Allerton's arm tighten convulsively round mine, and her breath I heard, come quick and short. I was hardly less agitated myself.

Steps—slow and deliberate steps—were presently heard ascending the stairs, the door opened, and in walked a gentleman in the uniform of a yeomanry officer, whom at the first glance I could have sworn to be the deceased Mr. Allerton. A slight exclamation of terror escaped Mrs. Allerton, followed by a loud hysterical scream from the Swinton young woman, as she staggered forward towards the stranger, exclaiming, "Oh, merciful God—my husband!" and then fell, overcome with emotion, in the outstretched arms.

"Yes," said the Rev. Mr. Wishart promptly, "that is certainly the gentleman I united to Maria Emsbury. What can be the meaning of this scene?"

"Is that sufficient, Mr. Sharp?" exclaimed the officer, in a voice that removed all doubt.

"Quite, quite," I shouted—"more than enough!"

"Very well, then," said William Martin, dashing off his black curling wig removing his side whiskers of the same color, and giving his own light, but now cropped head of hair, and clean-shaven cheeks to view. "Now then send for the police, and let them transport me—I richly merit it; I married this young woman in a false name; I robbed her of her money, and I deserve the hulks, if anybody ever did."

You might have heard a pin drop in the apartment whilst the repentant rascal thus spoke, and when he ceased, Mrs. Allerton, unable to bear up against the tumultuous emotion which his words excited, sank without breath or sensation upon the sofa. Assistance was summoned; and whilst the as yet imperfectly-informed servants were running from one to another with restoratives, I had leisure to look around. The widow Thorneycroft, who had dropped into a chair, sat gazing in bewildered dismay upon the stranger, who still held her lately-discovered misdeed in his arms; and I could see the hot perspiration which had gathered on her brow run in large drops down her cheeks. But the reader's fancy will supply the best image of this unexpected and extraordinary scene. I cleared the house of intruders and visitors as speedily as possible, well assured that matters would now adjust themselves without difficulty.

And so it proved. Martin was not sent to the hulks, though no question be as to his guilt. The self-sacrifice, as he deemed it, which he had at last made, pleaded for him, and so did his pretty-looking wife; and the upshot was, that the mistaken bride's dowry was restored, with something over, and that a tavern was taken for them in Piccadilly—the White Bear, I think it was—where they lived comfortably and happily. I have heard, for a considerable time, and having considerably added to their capital, removed to a hotel of a higher grade in the city, where they now reside. It was not at all surprising that the clergyman and others had been deceived. The disguise, and Martin's imitative talent, might have misled persons on their guard, much more men unsuspecting of deception. The cast in the eyes, as well as a general resemblance of features, also of course greatly aided the imposture.

Of Mrs. Rosamond Allerton, I have only to say, for it is all I know, that she is rich, unwedded, and still splendidly beautiful, though of course somewhat passé compared with herself twenty years since. Happy, too, I have no doubt she is, judging from the placid brightness of her aspect the last time I saw her beneath the transport of the Crystal Palace, on the occasion of its opening by the Queen. I remember wondering at the time, if she often recalled to mind the passage in her life which I have here recorded.

The One Black Spot

On the evening of a bleak, cold March day, in an early year of this century, a woman, scarcely clad, led a high road towards the old city of Exeter. They crept close to the hedge-side to shelter themselves from the clouds of dust, which the sudden gusts of east wind blew in their faces.

They had walked many miles, and the boy limped painfully. He often looked up anxiously into his mother's face, and asked if they had much farther to go? She scarcely appeared to notice his inquiries; her fixed eyes and sunken cheek gave evidence that sorrow absorbed all her thoughts. When he spoke, she drew him closer to her side, but made no reply; until at length, the child, wondering at her silence, began to sob. She stopped and looked at her child for a moment, her eyes filled with tears. They had gained the top of a hill, from which was visible in the distance, the dark massive towers of the cathedral and the church-spires of the city. She pointed them out, and said, "We shall soon be there, Ned." Then she lay down on a tree that was felled by the road-side, she took "Ned" on her lap, and, bending over him, wept aloud.

"Are you very tired, mother?" said the boy, trying to comfort her. "It's a long way—but don't cry—we shall see father when we come there."

"Yes—you will see your father once more."

She checked herself, and, arising, to dry her tears, she looked wistfully towards the place of her destination.

The tramp of horses, coming up the hill that had just ascended, drew the boy's attention to that direction. In a moment he had sprung from his mother, and was shouting, with childish delight, at the appearance of a gay cavalcade which approached. About thirty men on horseback, in crimson liveries, surrounded two carriages, one of which contained two of His Majesty's Judges, accompanied by the High Sheriff of the county, who, with his javelin-men, was conducting them to the city, in which the Lent Assizes were about to be held.

The woman knelt until the carriages and the gaudy javelin-men had turned the corner at the foot of a hill, and were no longer visible; with her hands clasped together, she had prayed to God to temper with mercy the heart of the Judge, before whom her unfortunate husband, now in jail, would have to stand his trial. Then, taking the boy again by the hand—unable to explain to him what he had seen—she pursued her way with him, silently, along the dusty road.

As they drew nearer to the city, they overtook various groups of stragglers, who had deemed it their duty, in spite of the inclement weather, to wander some miles out of the city to catch an early glimpse of "Mr. Lorde Judge," and the gay Sheriff's officers. Troops, also, of itinerant ballad-singers, rope-dancers, mountebanks, and caravans of wild beasts, still followed the Judges, as they had done throughout the circuit. "Walk more slowly, Ned," said his mother, checking the boy's desire to follow the "shows." "I am very tired; let us rest a little here." They lingered until the crowd was far ahead of them—and were left alone on the road.

Late in the evening, as the last stragglers were returning home, the wayfarers found themselves in the suburbs of the city, and the forlorn woman looked around anxiously for a lodging. She feared the noisy people in the streets; and, turning timidly towards an old citizen who stood by his garden-gate, clattering to his housekeeper, and watching the passers-by—there was a kindness in his look which gave her confidence—so, with a homely courtesy, she ventured to inquire of him where she might find a decent resting-place.

"Have you never been here before?" he asked.

T. J. EDENS,
Sole Agent for Nfld.

"Never but once, sir, when I was a child, many years ago."

"What part of the country do you come from?"

"Uffulme."

"Uffulme? How did you get here?"

"We have walked."

"You don't say you have trudged all the way with that youngster?"

The housekeeper frowned the reply by loudly announcing to the old gentleman that his supper was waiting. "We have no lodgings, my good woman," she said, turning away from the gate.

"Stop, Martha, stop," said the citizen. "Can't we direct them somewhere—you see they are strangers—I wonder where they could get a lodging?"

"I am sure I don't know," replied Martha, peevishly; "your supper will be cold—come in!"

"We've had no supper," said the boy.

"Poor little fellow!" said the old gentleman; "then I am sure you shall not go without it. Martha, the bread and cheese!" And, opening the garden-gate, he made the travellers enter and sit down in the summer-house, whilst he went to fetch them a draught of cider.

In spite of Martha's grumbling, he managed to get a substantial repast; out it grieved him that the woman, though she thanked him very gratefully and humbly, appeared unable to eat.

"Your boy eats heartily," said he, "but I am afraid you don't enjoy it."

With a choking utterance she thanked him, but could not eat.

Itching Piles For 27 Yr

Despaired of ever getting relief cure came 3 years ago when I used DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Mr. John Johnson, Cowley writes: "Three years ago I was of blind, itching piles of twenty years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that would be the only relief I could get from the terrible misery of piles. Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth a dollar a box instead of sixty cents a box. I am a different man since using it in farming all the time now and never miss a day. Words fail to express gratitude for the cure this Ointment made for me. I cannot tell half much about it as it deserves. A one doubting this can write direct to me."

Do not accept an imitation or substitute in place of Dr. Chase's Ointment for there has yet to be discovered a treatment which so promptly gives relief from itching and so thoroughly cures every form of piles. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Receipts.
