IS IT INFANTICIDE? Shocking Discovery in an Outhouse on Wellington Street.

Late yesterday afternoon some children playing in the rear of a vacant brick house on Wellington street near the corner of Queen's avenue, discovered the body of an unfant in the vault of an outhouse. Detective Rider was notified and in company with Coroner Flock, visited the scene, but as it was growing dark and they thought the body was frozen in the ice they delayed operations until this morning when a colored man named Lewis was engaged to take out the body. It was found in the morning that only the skin of the infant was attached to the ice. Everything points to the conclusion that the body had been placed there but a short time before discovery. Appearances indicate that the babe was born alive, and it is thought that it was consigned to the vault very soon after death. An inquest will be held at the police station this afternoon. as it was growing dark and they thought the

LONDON WEST.

The funeral of Mrs. Denis Daly, of London West, who died at Hamilton on the 23rd inst., took place this morning, and was largely attended by her friends and acquaintances. The pall-bearers were Messrs. D. Daly, D. Regan, P. J. Cook, M. O'Mara, M. Mulkern, M. O'Mearand P. Kelly. Referring to her death the Hamilton Spectator says: On the occasion of the death of the late Capt. McKinty, of the customs department, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Daly, of London West, came down to attend the funeral. She cangnt a cold which developed into pneumonia, and yesterday her lifeless body was taken back to London for interment. Mrs. Daly was about 60 years of age, and was the mother of the late Hugh Daly, M. C. R. train dispatcher at St. Thomas. She resided here for many years before going to London, and was well known and highly respected. A large number attended the funeral yesterday to the station. The funeral of Mrs. Denis Daly, of Lon-

TERRIBLE DILEMMA.

An Engineer Obliged to Run Over Man or Jeopardize a Train Load of Passengers.

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 25 .- Yesterday afternoon Erik, Pa., Feb. 20.—1 esternay atternoon when the west-bound Nickel-plate passenger train reached the high bridge over Walnut Creek near Swanton the engineer found a man in the middle of the bridge. To reverse the engine on the bridge would have imperilled the train and its 100 passengers.

Although the poor fellow stood wringing his hands in agony and looked pleadingly at the engineer, the latter kept on and sent the man down 150 feet into eternity rather than imperil the lives in his keeping. The man was unknown.

Arizona's Horror.

Phenix, A. T., Feb. 25.—A courier has just returned from the lower Hassaymapa and reports that a tremendous mountain of water came down the Hassaymapa at about 2 o'clock Saturday morning, and that 34 men lost their lives at the lower dam where they were at work. Thirty-one were whites and three were Chinese. The courier reports the town of Wickenburg all right. The loss of life in the valley between Wickenburg and the dam may not be known for some days, but may reach 30 or 40. The courier states that the upper dam had undoubtedly broken and carried the two dams below down with it. The loss of property in the dams alone will amount to about $800,000.

(Via Dalziels News Agency.)

PHENIX, Ariz., Feb. 25.—The loss of life by Saturday's disaster at Hassayampa River dam is appalling. A courier states that 131 white men and three Chinamen perished. He also says after the water had subsided from the first break a large force of men were set to work searching for bodies. While thus engaged the upper dam broke and all the rescuers were swept away. At Wickenburg, 30 miles west of the scene of the diseaster, the bodies of three women, four men and one child had been discovered, but could not be recognized. Two bodies were found at Seymour, twelve miles east, a number of teamsters and eight horses were drowned.

I did with so much care, and at the stime endeavoured, as far as my men would allow, to preserve the very languard which he used in its narration, that reader, who cares to interest himself in history, will no doubt become quite acquainted with Professor Paul as I myself.

acquainted with Professor Paul as I myself.

These notes have been in my possess now for nearly seven years, and during time they have been read and handled repeatedly by my friends, that when I ce to transcribe them I found that in pla the writing was completely obliterated.

Whenever this was the case, hower I did not hesitate to draw upon my mory to supply the missing part, as I alw found it was very clear and decided; but have never resorted to this expedient unit.

have never resorted to this expedient unit was absolutely necessary for me to do in order to render the story intelligible. This has not occurred except at very r intervals; and the reader may safely r upon the accuracy of this transcripti Indeed I may add that fafter it was copleted, it was carefully compared with original notes, and was found to be corresponded to the correspondence of the correspondence in every particular, with the exception the few passages to which I have alrea

The reader will also find, related at t end of these notes, a brief account of sor events in the life of Professor Paul, whi afterwards came under my personal obse events in the life of Professor Paul, whi afterwards came under my personal obsection, and which I have found to be so timately connected with the history as sout in notes, that I have thought it wou be unwise to separate them.

I am unable now after so great a lap of time, to recollect how it was that Professor Paul, came to spinle, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single, me, out as, the second paul came to single paul came to single paul came to second paul ca

fessor Paul came to single me out as t person to whom he should relatehis histor but after reading the first iew passages my notes I find that it was evidently his request that I first began to list

The notes begin as follows:

I went down to see Professor Paul the next evening as I had promised. He has requested me to lay aside all ceremon and come at once upon my arrival into the little room behind the shop, and I accord little room behind the shop, and 1 accordingly did.

I found a bright coal fire burning chee fully in the grate, and before it, in a largarmchair, sat the old man apparently deep meditation. He was seemingly ergossed with his thoughts, that he did not be a seemingly and the second statement of notice my entrance, and continued still t sit in silence, so without waiting longer drew a chair up to the fire and sat mysel down.

It was some time after this, that awaling from his reverie, he happened to tur his eyes in my direction and for the first time became aware of my presence. Hooked at me for a moment with a some what questioning glance, and then as recollecting something said slowly:

"Ah, yes, now I remember. It is ver good of you to come, my friend. I ar afraid you will find my history very unit teresting, but it has at last become neces any that I shold relate it to some one, an as you were a brother artist I somehouthought you would be the most likely t give me a patient hearing. I will try an make it as brief as I can, and as there remains a considerable time before the daupon which it must be finished, I will be careful to distribute it over as many even into as possible, that you may not become too fatigued at any one time."

When he had said this he slowly settle himself back in his chair and continued: It was some time after this, that awak himself back in his chair and continued:

"My friend, before I tell you any part o
my life's story, you must first promise m that you will keep it a close secret within your soul, until after the time of my death."

I nodded my assent.
"On your honor as a brother artist you will not let a word of it to be known to any living person until such time as I have passed away."

"Yes," I said, "I promise it, Professor Paul, and if I promise I will surely keep my word."

word."

He seemed satisfied, but added, "In will not be anything which you would ear to tell in any event; and my asking to be kept a secret is only a whim, the result of a mere fancy. I have always been afraid that if it were known perhaps people would stare at me, and I wouldn't like that; I dread it. But my history will be safe in your keeping, my friend; I feel sure it will; and beside there is a reason I am obliged
