Instructions to Shipwreckers.
The following are revised instructions to shippers, who would best consult their own interests by observing them in consigning goods to Montreal:
Game—Partridges should always be hung up by the feet, and never by the head. In shipping, wrap them carefully in paper, and pack in small boxes or barrels, with the head down, marking the number of brace on the cover.
Dressed Poultry.—Abstain from feeding poultry 24 hours before killing. All poultry, but more especially turkeys, should be killed by bleeding in the neck, and plucked clean while the body is warm, leaving on the head and feet as well as the feathers on wings and tail. Do not draw the entrails or scald the birds. The last process is readily detected by buyers, who will not pay within 1 or 2 cents per pound of the price they will give for dry plucked goods. Let them cool off, then draw the feet up under the breast and put the head under one of its wings, tie them up pump to keep them in good shape. Before packing poultry should be thoroughly dry and cold; if packed with the animal heat in, it will be almost sure to spoil. Sort your poultry carefully and have the No. 1 stock of uniform quality. Pack the No. 2 stock in separate packages. Pack neatly in nice clean cases holding from 100 to 200 pounds each. Line the cases with clean paper, but never use straw in packing, and never wrap the birds in paper, pack as closely as possible and fill the packages full to prevent shifting about while in transit. Avoid putting more than one kind in a package, as mixtures of geese and ducks, or chickens and turkeys, are more difficult to sell.

Mark each case with correct weights, gross, tare and nett, also the number of birds contained, so that proper delivery may be sured for.

—The advertising columns of a newspaper are among the most important, for no man really becomes acquainted even with the news of the day until he has thoroughly perused the advertisements. They are the pulse of the nation, and national activity, pulse contain not only rare specimens of human idiosyncrasies, but afford a general view of life in every possible phase. They aid the arts and sciences; they minister to love; they speak of hunger sometimes they excite a smile, sometimes a tear. To the poor man they promise health; to the poor man they offer wealth; the pleasure seeker is posted in amusements; the book buyer learns the title and price of the latest work; the traveler learns of a desirable and eligible tenement; the traveler of the best means of conveyance; the unemployed of employment; in fine, every imaginable

A LITERARY TREAT.

Principal Miller's Lecture on Tenny-son, at Huron College.

A Large Audience and a Brilliant Effort—Wherein Tennyson is Great—Pleasant Musical Variations.

From a man of Principal Miller's brilliant scholastic attainments, something good might be expected; nor was the large audience that filled the ample lecture hall in the least disappointed.

It was a literary treat of a character that one is seldom privileged to enjoy, and which may only be afforded by a mind of rare capability and cultivation.

His subject was "Tennyson," an interesting and timely topic. The lecturer was introduced by the Dean of Huron, who presided, and frankly proclaimed the chairman an unmitigated nuisance. Principal Miller, in opening, said that in the death of Tennyson a great literary epoch came to a close.

His lecture was a masterpiece of logic and eloquence, and was listened to with the most intense interest. The lecturer
