

the queen and bees from the weaker and united with the stronger, and in no instance was the queen injured. Had they been left for several days before performing this operation they would have marked the location and would not have accepted the queen without her first being caged. We shall this spring be able to supply many of our friends, who have not been so successful in wintering, with a fresh stock of bees, as we can spare $4000 or $5000 worth and yet have all we can possibly care for. We intended starting more yards this season, but with the care of the BEE JOURNAL and the increase of our supply business we shall be unable to do so.
