

Humber River and on, say, to Mimico, or take a tour over hill and dale through HIGH PARK, recently acquired by the city, by the munificence of one of its public-spirited residents, as a resort for the citizens.

EXHIBITION BUILDINGS.

Returning, if it be Fair time, the visitor will do well to drive to EXHIBITION PARK, and take a look at its many attractions and a saunter through the CRYSTAL PALACE (see illustration), with its displays of Provincial and Metropolitan manufactures and, in the adjoining buildings, at the array of agricultural products gathered together annually by the Industrial Exhibition Association. He should not miss either, a run through the "Zoo," or the view, from the main building, of the Island, the passing traffic of the lake, and the throng of visitors in the spacious grounds, with the fine memorial pillar, which marks the site of Fort Rouillé, the early French trading-post of Toronto, before the fair "Queen City of the West" had a habitation, or was more than a beautiful, far-off dream.
