

Shingles, Staves and Hoops, besides Pot-ashes; which being carried to Market will furnish them, in return, with Horses, Cattle, Hogs and other Necessaries, to stock the Land when subdued. After which, all they have to do, is to raise Corn and Grass to feed the Stock; in which Culture they will find the Soil generally so fertile as abundantly to answer the Pains bestowed upon it. In the mean time the Indians, for a few Beads, and other such Trifles, will supply them with every thing that the Woods and Waters afford.

What these are, I have already mentioned, and shall only add some few Fish which are peculiar to the Country, as first a Flettau, a flat Fish, like a Plaice, but five Feet long; the Head is a Dainty. Another, called Lencornet, being a Species of the Cuttle-Fish; it is good Eating dressed any way but makes all the Sauce as black as Ink; there is also the Goberge, the Sea-Plaice, the Requiem, the Dog-Fish. Add to this, that the Lakes abound with large Salmon-Trout, and Tortoises.

There are several Lakes; the chief of which is that of Rossignol, being irregularly round 'tis three Leagues across; it lies at the Head of that River, and near to a small Lake, from which runs a small River down to Port-Royal. There are three other Lakes in the Marshes, near the French Settlements about the Bottom of the Bay of Minas, and a sixth lies
