LONDON, THURSDAY, MAY 30.

AUSTRALIA, CANADA AND THE CONFERENCE.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. M. Smith, of this city, is a Conservative, but not a Chamberlainite. A student of economics, who has written from time to time on questions of trade and currency, he has closely observed commercial conditions in the mother country and Canada, and is convinced that Great Britain will never furnish the groundwork of an imperial preferential scheme by imposing taxes on food. In a letter to the press, he expresses the hope that the British people will not judge Canadians by the unreasonable attitude of Premier Deakin of Australia. Col. Smith adds:

"Canada claims and exercises the right to make her tariff to suit her own ideas, and she agrees that Great Britain has the same right.
Now why should not Great Britain be allowed to exercise that right without constant nagging from certain of the colonies? If England should commence to worry us by constantly requesting that we change our fiscal policy to suit her interests what would we think?"

"When the present Canadian preferential tariff was introduced there was no pretence that it was introduced for the benefit of England; it was simply carrying out the policy of the Canadian Government. Any benefit to England was considered right and proper, especially as England was taking everything we could send her free of duty. The idea of asking more, when all had already been given, never entered our heads."

"England can do no wrong for Canada in the matter of tariff without imposing the hated food taxes which her people will not tolerate. Canada can do no more for England in the same matter except at the expense of the Canadian manufacturer. To increase the preference by raising the tariff against foreigners taxes not benefit Great Britain in the least and Canada is not likely to lower the tariff in any case."

"The same of unreasonableness was reached when it was proposed that some of the colonies should get something out of the revenue taxes already imposed on the colonies. The British people in the shape of duties on tobacco, wines, tea, etc."

If the British people choose to reverse their fiscal system, and to tax foreign foodstuffs for the benefit of colonial producers, the colonies will be disposed to increase the margin of the British preference, though the manufacturing interests will fight against any such reduction in the duties on British goods. The course the British people will take, however, is their own concern, and any pressure from the colonies could be an unwarranted interference, which would be resented by British free traders, who are at present the great majority of the nation.
As Col. Smith says, we Canadians would be incensed if Great Britain should worry us by constantly requesting us to change our fiscal policy.
For the same reason, the British people had reason to take offense at the attitude of Premier Deakin and his Australian colleagues, Sir William Lyne, The Australian statesmen were guilty of downright impertinence in their public criticisms of the British Government after the conference, and deserved the rebuke of the under secretary of state for the colonies, who reminded them that the laws of hospitality were binding upon the guests of the nation. Canadians will be judged by the conduct of their Premier, which was faultlessly correct.

AN IMPERIAL PROJECT.

Not the least important result of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's visit to London is his success in inducing the Imperial Conference to endorse the project of fast Atlantic and Pacific steamship lines, which, with the two great Canadian transcontinental railways, will form a complete all-British steamship and rail route between Great Britain, through Canada, and the far east and Australia, as direct and speedy as it is possible to make it. There are many evidences in support of the argument that Canada requires a fast ocean steamship system, both east and west.
Not merely in anticipation of problematic needs of the distant future, but for the actual requirements of today.
The great transportation interests of this country are calling for increased facilities by land and sea. The oversea trade of the Dominion for the last twelve months was nearly $100,000,000 greater than for the previous year, which itself was a record-breaker, and the experience of the business world is that increased freight means increased passenger travel. Shippers and agents generally, on both sides of the Atlantic, largely engaged in handling passengers and freight, are unanimous in the opinion that a fast system such as the Canadian Premier is promoting, is justified under existing conditions, and Earl Grey, the Governor-General, now on a visit to England, is strongly supporting Sir Wilfrid's views and using his influence to help in carrying them to a successful issue.

Towards the cost of carrying out this scheme, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has expressed his readiness to ask the Dominion Parliament to vote one million dollars a year as Canada's contribution. At the present time all that the Dominion pays in the way of assistance to steamship lines is about $400,000 per annum as direct subsidies, or as payment for mail carrying to vessels plying between Canada and British ports, and $187,900 annually to the Canadian-Australia line. But the wonderful expansion of Canadian trade which has made necessary the building of a second transcontinental railway has also shown the need of increasing present transportation facilities between Canada, the mother country, and the Australasian colonies, and in thus bringing the matter before the Imperial and colonial representatives assembled in London, Sir Wilfrid has performed a service to Canada and the Empire.

What has rendered a better service on the Pacific particularly desirable is the fact that, owing to the failure of the United States Congress at its last session to pass a ship subsidy bill, which was followed by the withdrawal by the Oceanic Steamship Company of the steamers on which the United States mails have been transported direct from San Francisco to New Zealand and Australia, the entire mail-carrying business of the North American continent to the antipodes is now in Canadian hands. To hold this, and to make competition the more difficult, if not impossible, faster steamers will be needed. As regards the Atlantic, by putting on a 20-knot service, as proposed, a day at least will be saved in time by passengers bound for Britain, while Canadian mails will be landed in the old country with equal saving of time—no mean considerations in these days of rush and hurry.

TO CONTROL UTILITIES.

The State of New York is about to put to the test a plan for regulating all public utilities, with the exception of telephones, the working of which will be watched with interest everywhere.

According to a bill which recently passed the Legislature on the recommendation of Governor Hughes, the direction of these public services will be vested in two commissions, one of which will have jurisdiction over Greater New York, and the other over the counties outside the big city. It will be the duty of these commissions to investigate the affairs of the various corporations and to regulate them in the public interest. Not only will they control the issue of stock, but will ascertain the actual amount of money invested, and from the receipts over-above the cost of maintenance and reasonable dividends, will determine the fares and charges the public should be called upon to pay. The commissions will practically manage these utilities, as their powers include authority to order, and to see that the order is obeyed, such changes or improvements in the service of the railway, electric light, gas, express and other corporations, as to them seems best.

This law, in empowering the commissioners to command obedience to their demands, is in advance of any legislation yet passed by the state. Of course, it was with anything but a good grace that the corporations received the measure. They regarded it as an unwarranted interference with their concerns. They did not object to commissions investigating their affairs, and making public their discoveries, but to allow their capitalization or expenditure to be affected, they contended, was going too far. The commissions will get to work at once, and it will be interesting to watch developments.

Every citizen of London should read Engineer Chipman's report on the water problem, published in this issue.

The prosecution in the Emerson libel case is trying to discover who wrote the offensive article. Thereby may hang a tale.

"No more cold weather in sight," says the Toronto Observatory man. But he has been short-sighted on more than one occasion.

"Mind your own business" is a wholesome rule, which Australia's representatives at the Imperial Conference overlooked.

Professor Wiggins, of Ottawa, has been heard from again, and attributes the cold weather to the existence of two moons.
But late diners have noticed the phenomenon in all sorts of weather.

To put it mildly, Hon. W. J. Hanna showed downright cheek in some of his utterances at Forest last night. He coolly declared that not one cent of revenue would have been collected from the Cobalt district but for the business methods of the Whitney Government. There would have been no Cobalt but for the enterprise of the Rose Government, and Mr. Hanna has no right to say that the same Government would not have made the wealth of the district contribute to the public coffers.
His statements are damaging to his reputation as a public man.

IN SEASON.

(Chicago News.)

"Boss!" shouted the big cook from the kitchen, "we have a lot of scraps out here that ain't working."
"Lots of scraps, eh?" replied the proprietor of the Shovel-down luncheon room.
"Mix them all together, add a little fry tabasco sauce, and then put a sign out side, 'Central American Pudding Today.'"

A HINT IN THE HAIR.

(Kansas City Star.)

Society is very strict in Japan about the little matters of hairdressing, and we believe the woman who would neglect to abide by the prevailing custom. Not alone in the better classes, but among the poorer people as well, the eligible young woman, the widow who wishes to marry again and the widow who doesn't, may always be distinguished by the way in which they dress their hair.

EUCHRED.

(Harper's Weekly.)

Mrs. Crawford—Why was your husband more angry than usual when he came home so late?
Mrs. Crawford—You see, dear, I woke up before he had time to set the clock back.

ENGLAND'S BEAUTY.

(London Daily Graphic.)

In the next week or two England will be beyond all question the most beautiful country in Europe. From one end of it to the other there is a consensus of opinion that orchards never showed such promise of fruit.

THE STILE.

(Isabel Frye.)

We both walked slowly over the yellow grass.
Beneath the sunset glow
And then he climbed the stile I did not pass.
And then we said good-bye.

He paused one moment; I leaned on the stile
And faced the hazy lane;
But neither of us spoke until we both Just said good-bye.

And I went homeward to our quiet farm.
And he went on his way;
And he has never crossed that field again.
From that time to this day.

I wonder if he ever gives a thought To what he left behind—And I start sometimes, dreaming that I hear
A footstep in the wind.

If he had said but one regretful word, Or I had shed a tear,
He would not go alone about the world, Nor I sit lonely here.

Alas! Our hearts were full of angry pride, And love was choked in strife;
And so the stile, beyond the yellow grass, Stands straight across our life.

EXPLAINED.

(Punch.)

"Why is Jones graving a beard?"
"Oh, I believe his wife made him a present of some ties."

RULE WORKING BOTH WAYS.

(Washington Herald.)

An English judge expresses the opinion that husbands should have a legal right to inspect and revise their wives' visiting lists.
The women, probably would be glad to acquiesce, provided they were granted the same privilege in respect to their husbands' visiting lists.

FREELY GRANTED.

(Edmonton Bulletin.)

Eastern newspapers should show a little generosity in giving as much publicity to the salubrity of Alberta's climate as they have done to the unwelcome rigor of the present season.

NOT THAT WAY.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

"Have you ever been in jail before?" demanded the judge.
"No, your honor, honestly, never."
"Of course you haven't honestly. Few men get there that way."

HOW LONDON HANDLES
GRATERS.

(Boston Herald.)

A useful object lesson in the proper treatment of "graters" is furnished by London.
At West Ham, one of the poorer districts of the English capital, nine out of the ten members of the board of guardians have been convicted of receiving bribes from contractors and employees. The sums involved were not large—$500 accepted from a doctor to insure his getting a certain medical appointment represents the largest amount. But justice has followed with as much swiftness and severity as though thousands of dollars had been stolen. The chief offenders have been sentenced to the hard labor, the most drastic form of criminal punishment, for two years. But perhaps the most significant feature of the incident is that these dishonest officials were pronounced socialists.

SUGGESTING A CHEAPER VISION.

(Megendorfer Blatter.)

Wife—Karl, when I go to the Riviera I will dream of you every night.
Husband—I would rather you stayed here and dreamed of the Riviera.

THE BRITISH WORKMAN.

(Sheffield Daily Telegraph.)

Despite protection on one side and socialism on the other side, neither in France nor Germany is the workman so free, contented or well paid as the Englishman.

WOMEN'S CHANCE IN LITERA-TURE.

(The Academy.)

The world is waiting for the woman author, who need not be great, but only natural and downright, to reveal to it (as a male world) the true inwardness of a woman's nature, her feelings towards other women, what attracts her in men, and what repels, how she really feels when she is kissed by a man, and how she feels when she is not kissed, and a thousand other things which a man author can only guess at, and in no case can expound Here, surely, is a chance for a woman writer.

TO HUDSON BAY.

(Toronto Globe.)

It will be to the utter discredit of the present Ontario Government if the Ontario and Transcontinental Railway is not completed to Hudson Bay long before any other railway reaches it from any direction. There is a widespread and perhaps well-founded impression that the construction of the great section now under contract is proceeding much more slowly than is at all necessary.
Reasonable rapidity of construction will not add materially to the cost of the main line, and the branches can wait. The first great objective is Hudson Bay, and there is no reason why the route to it should not be completely located within the next few months. A year from next fall at the latest should see the whole line under contract.
