There are quite a number of old ball players in Philadelphia and Connie has these men scattered about the grand stand, bleachers and every other available point, watching the sig-rals of the visiting teams. These old heads, not in uniform, but on Connie's staff, just the same, are largely responsible for a good many Ath-letic victories. They know the game well and are quick to catch on to signs. What one misses the other generally gets, so that after a club has played one game on the Philadelphia grounds, Con-nie has a written report containing the signals of the visiting club for various plays. Connie "tips off" his players and the next day a good many of the oppon-ent's inside plays are blocked. It was suggested that Cleveland em-ploy the same scheme, but the Forest City is shy on old heads who could be employed in the work. The best scheme talked of was for the various teams to change their signals every day they are in Philadelphia and therehy "double-cross" the foxy Mack.
