IN A SENSATIONAL FINISH

SENATORS WON ON FIGHTING SPIRIT

Vanquish the Giants in the Most Thrilling Game Ever Recorded.

The Real Hero of The World Series

JOHNSON TRIUMPHS

"Bucky" Harris was Individual Star, Crashing Out a Homer.

Every longing gratified, every wish fulfilled, the Senators and all the Washington fans yesterday afternoon when "Muddy" Ruel raced across the plate in the twelfth inning, bringing to a dramatic finish the hardest fought world's series ever recorded. Last night all Washington acclaimed Manager Harris and his team of fighting Senators, who had risen to supreme heights above every obstacle and literally beaten the Giants by a grim determination which harbored no thoughts of defeat. The final score was 4 to 3, the same count as New York had topped the initial game in the twelfth season in the same park just one week before.

(Walter Johnson, king of pitchers, was a happy man last night. His ambition realized, the memory of two bitter defeats wiped out, a victory in a world's series secured, an additional hope of securing this long sought for honor had vanished before the Giants' bats. It was a fitting climax to a long and honorable career. If Walter Johnson decides not to return to the mound next season he has indeed gone out in a blaze of glory.

Called on to take the mound in the ninth when the raging Giants were threatening to break the tie which Manager Harris had just created, Johnson displayed the coolness and cunning which has made him the premier pitcher of all time. Twice the Giants were in a position to score with one safe hit and probably clinch the game, but on each occasion Johnson, pitching as if his very life hung in the balance, baffled the heaviest of the New York sluggers.

Johnson looked like a different man yesterday. It appeared as if old "Feller Time" had lifted the weight of years off Walter's shoulders for a few short hours, as the "venerable" resembled strangely the Johnson of a dozen years ago. His fast ball appeared to have its old-time hop and his curves were breaking sharply. No less than five Giants fanned in the four innings he was on the firing line. Johnson had come into his own, and even the Giants, although vanquished, did not begrudge him his well-earned laurels.

Manager Harris shared the honors with Johnson. It was "Bucky" Harris, more than anything else which brought the first world's title to Washington in 40 years, who led the Senators to a single which sent home both runs scored, it was "Bucky" who scored the first run yesterday with a home run drive and, after New York had taken the lead by driving in three runs, it was again his deadly ball which had crashed out a single, sending home the tying runs. He also played a fine game around the key-stone sack.

Harris, although the youngest manager ever to win a league championship, was apparently able to hold his own with the great New York leader. Yesterday he started Ogden, a right-hander, and after Manager McGraw had showed his left-hand hitters into the game he replaced Ogden with McGraw, a southpaw. This showed McGraw faced by the choice of either keeping his left-hand hitters in the game or replacing them with right-handers and thus losing them for the balance of the game. McGraw was withdrawn. McGraw finally compromised and replaced Terry in the fourth, thus leaving that right-handed laborer later. Marberry entered the box in the sixth and McGraw took up the pitching burden in the ninth.

Manager McGraw used every strategy in an endeavor to cop the title. Batters, who started for New York, pitched a beautiful game until he weakened in the eighth. He was replaced by Neff. McQuillan was called into the breach in the ninth, when McGraw and the team showed signs of faltering, and the rally was stopped. Bentley entered the box in the eleventh, after Heinie Groh had hobbled to the plate in place of McQuillan and singled, although the hit was wasted. Bentley finished the game, and it was off his offerings that the Senators secured the winning run. Pitch hitters, pinch runners and even crumples were hurled into the fray by the rival managers in an effort to cop the game. The end came in the twelfth, Ruel, who had not made a hit in the series until he got a lucky scratch in the eighth yesterday afternoon, doubled to left with one down. Johnson walked to the plate and hit a roller to Jack-Neff, who spread broadcast, fumbled under the short stop kept Ruel at second base. The plate and dropped an additional $80,000 into the Senators' share of the third base line.

Pandemonium reigned in the Washington Park. The huge crowd swept onto the field and rushed wildly to the Senators' dug out and gave unrestrained vent to their pent up feelings which one week's sensational yet nerve-racking games had brought to the bursting point. Never has a baseball victory inspired the wave of enthusiasm such as swept across the continent when the news of the Senators' triumph was spread broadcast yesterday with the wires and through the air.

It was a terrible disappointment to John McGraw to be turned back on the threshold of his greatest ambition, a fourth world's series crown. It was, however, a marvellous triumph for "Bucky" Harris, the dynamic, 27-year-old leader of the fighting Senators.

Yesterday's game, setting a new record for the series in that it was the first time that two twelve-inning games were played in one world's series, fairly sparked a thrilling play, terrific hitting, spectacular defensive work, brilliant and erratic pitching and good and bad baseball. One dramatic moment followed closely on another, as the game went into extra innings, the fans were keyed up to highest pitch, and they hung breathlessly on each pitched ball as it was borne home upon the bat of a hero.

The game of replacing them with right-handers and thus losing them for the balance of the game. McGraw was withdrawn. ## Outstanding Features In Final World Series Tilt

The timely hitting of Harris, as "Bucky" was responsible for the first three runs scored by Washington, driving in two and scoring the other himself on a homer.
The achievement of a life's ambition by Walter Johnson, to win a world's series game.
The establishing of a record in the 1924 series of two twelve-inning games.
The large number of players used, a total of 81.
The fact that at least one home run has been hit in every game in the series.
The usual ninth-inning rally by the losing team when a hit would tie or win the game.
The appearance of crippled Heinie Groh in the eleventh as a pinch hitter and the fact that he came through with a hit in spite of an injured knee.
The fact that both shortstops made two errors.
The use of four pitchers by both managers.
Brilliant stops by Harris and Bludge which cut off Giant rallies.
The shifting of outfielders by Manager McGraw to have Young, a faster man, covering left field in the eleventh in place of Meusel.
Young took a place in right. The players returned to their old positions in the twelfth inning.
The appearance of Marberry in the box for the fourth time for Washington.
The fact that New York had 14 men left on base to Washington's 8.

KILLING A SLIP WITH KINDNESS

(Boston Transcript.) Essex County in New Jersey finds fame at home of a movement to kill an ancient and offensive jest with kindness. A group of mothers-in-law has organized under a constitution which announces that "we seek to kill the mother-in-law jest with kindness, to show that we are human and social beings who enjoy a bridge game and afternoon teas as well as do the young married matrons and her flapper sisters." It is a proclamation in keeping with the modern idea that woman is not only as young as she looks but as young as she feels. But how is a joke killed with kindness? What is the process by which it is left forth to a merciful death? The mothers-in-law of Essex County ought really to elaborate their ideas on the subject.

The jest about the mother-in-law is not the only one that is objectionable. There are people who still find food for mirth in the story wit that makes racial characteristics its target. There is the propensity of human-kind to treat with ill-timed sarcasm that which is new and strange. The suffering endured by Samuel Pierpont Langley because of the ridicule heaped upon his attempts to solve the problem of flight is not forgotten. Jokes based on physical deformity are, perhaps, no longer in good form, but to what extent is the movement for a wiser treatment of mental ailments hindered by the frequent jesting allusions to padded cells and "baths in the belfry"? If somebody can tell how to kill these jokes with kindness, the information will be of value. There has been an impression that to put an end to them would require treatment that persons whose sense of the ludicrous is greater than their sense of the fitness of things might regard as harsh, not to say brutal.

As to the mother-in-law joke, while it is objectionable, the changes on it have been rung so long and so often that it has become monotonous. It is

THREE FOOTBALL GAMES TODAY

St. John High and Rothersey Collegiate School to Meet.

The High School football team will enter its game with the Rothersey Collegiate School fifteen on the Lancaster field this afternoon handicapped by a lack of practice during the week, but strengthened considerably by the presence of their captain, Linton.

The local boys turned out yesterday afternoon for the first time in several days and went through a snappy drill. R. H. Bennett, the coach, gave them an hour and a half of scrim and three-quarter line practice, and the lads shaped up fairly well.

There will be two other games on the same field. At 2 o'clock the Martellos will meet the Orioles in an Inter-league fixture; at 8 o'clock the High School will line up against the Orioles; and at 4 o'clock the Fairville Wanderers and the Canucks will play an Intermediate League game. ## CHRIS NEWTON IS TO MEET M'INTYRE

Chris Newton, the Toronto Flash, will battle Johnny McIntyre in the main bout of the next Commercial A. C. boxing show, which is to be held at St. Andrew's rink on Monday, October 20. The proposed Jimmie Cox-McIntyre bout for this city has been postponed until November at the request of the New York boxer, who finds it difficult to appear here at this time.

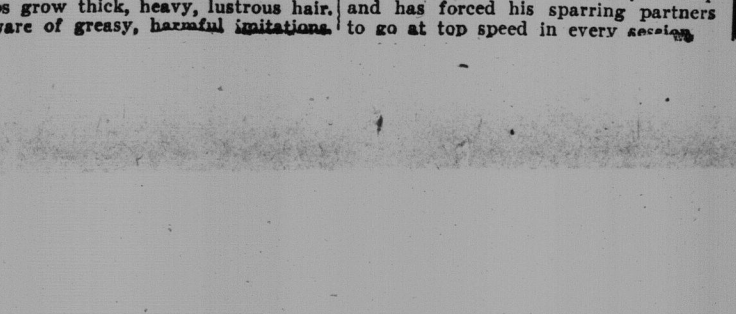

Chris Newton is in the same stable with Jack Redick, Donnie Mack and Teddy Joyce, and comes here with an enviable record. He is twenty-two years old and weighs from 135 to 137 pounds. The Toronto boxer is a former Canadian amateur lightweight champion and at one time won the international championship, as well as representing Canada at the Olympic games in 1924. Newton is boxing the main bout at Charterfield, Pa., this week with Eddie Pinchot; if he wins he will meet Cuddy DeMare there next week. Newton recently defeated Joe Hall in Buffalo. The latter is the well-known colored lightweight. They were rematched for the semi-final in Buffalo to the postponed Carpenter-Statley bout.

Newton, the most colorful boxer in Canada, a real ring wildcat, is one of the few who has opened up and showed the public all they had. A rugged fighter who is, according to Toronto sport writers, the best up to 140 pounds in Canada. Among others, Newton has met and defeated George Fife of Toronto. This worthy pair of battlers met twice, with the first going to a draw and Newton winning the second by a clear margin. Newton, also known as the fighting Irishman, has defeated the following and others: Joe Hall, Eddie Pinchot, Chubby Brown, Kid Dube, Willie Devenney, George Fife, Kid Lee, Sailor Byron, Johnny Darcy, Roy Moore, Lew Paluso and Puggy Morton.

From Toronto, where Newton is doing his training, comes the report that Newton is as fit as a fiddle. The Ontario boy has had Frankie Bull, Bert Harris, Alec Burley and Teddy Joyce assisting him in his workouts. Newton is a sturdy lad with a hefty wallop, and has forced his sparring partners to go at top speed in every encounter.

"There's something about them you'll like"

"Buck" Harris Says It was Inspiration That Carried Them Through.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

(United Press Sports Editor.)

New York, Oct. 11.—Washington's victory in the American League pennant race was one of the most popular ever scored in major league baseball. The club was a hot favorite as soon as it began to appear that the Senators had a chance to win the pennant, and the support that was shouted at the players all around the circuit had much to do in keeping the team in good spirit.

Walter Johnson said that the encouragement the team found in the realization that the fans in every city wanted them to beat out the Yankees was one of the biggest factors that contributed to their success. The team certainly did win on spirit, and if the Yankees had been on their toes and fighting all the way, Washington might not have gotten into the world's series.

Buck Harris, the 27-year-old manager never let his head droop and he spread the same spirit among the whole team. It is interesting now to recall what Harris said when he was asked by the United Press to make a statement on what chances his team had to win the pennant.

The club was in Cleveland for the most important series. Harris replied in a telegram to New York, the first paragraph of which read: "Washington has the best chance of winning the pennant race. No team in the league is fighting so hard for the flag. There is no suggestion of defeat from Walter Johnson down to the youngest rookie. We are going to win! That's all there is to it."

There is a sermon in that last line, and if you are looking around for a reason why the Yankees should not calculate and won the pennant, look over that line and give it a little study.

Also look over the last paragraph of the statement which read: "Walter Johnson will pitch the opening game of the world's series if our arms and legs back and brains hold out. The Washington players are giving all they have every day to win. That spirit cannot be beaten."

Which recalls that famous slogan which was hung on the dressing room wall at Princeton and which inspired a very ordinary football team to go out and win a championship. The sign hung up by Coach Bill Roper was: "The team that won't be beaten can't be beaten."

It would have been a good thing if Miller Huggins could have plastered the walls of the Yankee dressing rooms with that slogan. Huggins would have been better off if he could have said about his team: "The New York players are giving all they have every day to win." The Yankees, of course, did not quit. They fought with great valiance up to the last day of the race, when no one but themselves would grant them a chance. But if the Yankees had played that way from the first of the season they would have been spared the necessity of breaking their hearts in a losing fight in the last three days of the season.

Buck Harris said in another paragraph of his statement: "The real reason for my confidence in the victory lies in the difference between the two contenders. The Yankees have tasted victory three times. It is an old story to them. We have never won. We are winning the first pennant Washington ever had. We would have been spared the necessity of winning because everybody is pulling together."

It was an old story to the Yankees. They couldn't get the thrill out of it. That inspired Senators were getting
