GIRL FOUND DEAD IN MUD AT CREEK

Police Believe Gladys Hayes was Suicide

Body of Colored Girl Found Early This Morning—Drowned, is Declaration After Post Mortem—She Had Been at Picnic and Dance.

St. John is confronted with another mystery in which the toll exacted of human life. About five o'clock this morning the lifeless body of Miss Gladys Hayes was found lying in the mud at the Marsh bridge, her clothing soaked and her hat lying about fifteen feet distant. There were no marks of violence, and all officials said indications pointed to an act of self-destruction, although the girl may have fallen into the water. The body was sent to the General Public Hospital by order of Coroner H. A. Porter, and a post-mortem examination was made by Dr. H. L. Abramson, provincial pathologist. Dr. Abramson said at noon that the girl undoubtedly was drowned. She was a colored girl about twenty-two years of age.

About five o'clock this morning Joseph Laroque, watchman at the McAvity plant in the Marsh road, was passing the bridge when he saw the body lying on the flats. He notified the police, and Policeman Coughlan, in company with Detective Kilpatrick and Saunders, went to the scene. The body was lying in the mud at the water's edge on the side of the creek farthest from the city. The unfortunate young woman's hat was found about fifteen feet away from where she was lying. The body was identified as that of Miss Gladys Hayes, whose mother, Mrs. Hattie Hayes, resides in Protection street, West Side, two weeks ago. Efforts to discover the movements of the young woman previous to her death resulted in discovering the following: She attended a picnic in Hampton yesterday and came in to the city in the early evening by train. An aluminum drinking cup taken from her clothing this morning contained a ticket from Hampton to St. John, but Rev. Claude Stewart, pastor of St. Philip's A. M. E. church, said this morning that he was positive she had come in on the train. Her mother also had been at the picnic, but had come in on a later train. It is known that the girl went to a dance at the residence of Fred Holder in Main street and there met Miss Rosemary Blissett, who also was with Annie Andrews, who resides in Union Alley.

Miss Blissett told a Times reporter this morning that she and Miss Hayes had left the dance together about 11:45 and had gone to the home of Mrs. Hayes, aunt of the dead girl, in Chapel street. They had stayed there until about two o'clock this morning when they had walked down Main street to the corner of Paradise road. There, after some argument as to which one would go with the other for the night, they parted, and Miss Rosemary says that the last time she saw Miss Hayes alive. It was said by the police that the girl had been drinking yesterday and last night, and that for the last three or four years she had been subject to such spells and had been hospitalized had been heard to say, "Oh, what's the use of living?" Considering this, together with the fact that she had been drinking last night, it is thought probable that her death was due to suicide. The detective reported that it was possible to smell liquor about the body this morning. The aluminum cup taken from her body also smelled strongly of liquor. There were no marks of violence about the body, and, in fact, the only mark was a small blue one under the eye, which, it was also said at headquarters, she received recently in a fracas on board of the West Indies boat. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Hattie Hayes of Protection street, West Side, two weeks ago and one brother.

Coroner Porter said at noon today that, so far as he was at present, no inquest would be held.
