MONEY WANTED

An unusual opportunity just now presents itself, for a person with $5,000 or so awaiting investment, such a person may buy a basic interest in a successful manufacturing confectionery business—with a history of five years' prosperity.

The business has outgrown itself, development along new, and larger, and more progressive lines is now contemplated, and new capital is required.

Such an investor is also offered a lucrative position in the business. If interested in a gilt-edge proposition, remunerative to a greater degree than ordinary, and safe to as great a degree as possible, write, right now, for details.

The Value of Birds.

(Ottawa Journal.)

The movement for increasing the bird population of the country is attracting additional support each year in the cities and towns, where appreciation of bird life is increasing. Many people are now making a study of birds and are encouraging them to spend the summers near their homes by providing nesting and other accommodation for them. But it is even more important for the farmer to protect and encourage the birds. Recognition of this is seen in the interest of agricultural colleges and government officials in the matter. The students of Macdonald College, Montreal, for instance, were given a lecture on the subject of birds and their usefulness the other day by the federal migr
