The Times publishes a long letter from Theodore S. Fay, late American Minister to Switzerland, which is mainly devoted to the repetition of Earl Eastell's late speech a: New Castle, in which he sawred that one side in America was striving for Empire and the other for Independence or power. Mr. Fay protests in the strongest terms against lard Bussell's reasoning and complains in general terms against the sympathy accorded to the rebels by the English and Continental journals. The Times-editorially riticises Fay's letter; it calculates it carries American prolixity to its If ray protests in the strongest terms against iord Bussell's reasoning and complains in gestell stream against the sympathy accorded to the reles by the English and Continental journals. The Times editorially criticiaes Fey's letter; it sys although it carries American prolitive to the sympathy accorded to the reless of the sympathy criticiaes Fey's letter; it sys although it carries American prolitive to the sympathy of the sympathy criticiaes fey's letter; it sys although it is not to be compared to the about and peeces of Cassius Clay and cheers of Lincoln's diplomatists. After arguing the question of Slavery in its relation to the existic contest and asserting that the recognition of Confederate Slates and peaceable separation will accomplish everything which the anti-slavery party has been advocating for years, the Times says for our own part we, as Englishmen, should be jud to see the establishment of the Confederate States simply because the political power of slavery experiments will be so much less than of yore, Formerly every fillibuter had the whole American Union at his back, and he knew it. The case will be different when the country which sends him out is only a kind of Angle-Saxon. Brazil could have been easily cured in its ambitious propensities. If the old union had lasted the extension of alwery over Maxico would have been certain after a few years; now, however, the South will find rivals determined to prevent her aggrandizement, and the cause of justice and civilization will gain by the quarrel of these partners in guilt.

These are some of the reasons which have influenced Europeans in their judgment of American fairs; they seem to us cogent; they have never been answered hitherto, and Mr. Fay does not attempt to answer tham. Until we hear some better aguments than his we shall remain without any desire for reconstruction of the Republic, which was as completely founded on principle of alwery as it the Government of the Confederate States, and which was moreover able to propagate alavery b as is the Government of the Confederate States, and which was moreover able to propagate slavery by aggressions on which Confederate States alone can never venture.

Special correspondence to the Times comes down to Getober 18th—unimportant.

At a Conscruative demonstration at Worcester, Earl Shrewsbury in allusion to American affairs said they saw Democracy on its trial and how it indied; he thought separation inevitable and predicted ultimate establishment of some sort of aristeracy in America.

Sir John Pakington at same meeting pointed to failure of Democracy in America as a warning to Eagland and expressed conviction that re-union of States was hopeless. He wished the Great Powers would reaconstrate against continuance of the war and while approving England's neutrality he regretted that Earl Russell in his recent speech had not in more decided language, expressed the views of England.

The Paris correspondent of the "Independence Belge" professes to have learned from reliable quarters that the projected in hervention of Mexico is conceived with ulterior views; time must come when cotton blockade can be no longer tolerated, and the furthest period allotted for game now on foot by North and South, to be played, is fixed for January stax; if at that date Southern States hold their own, their claim to John recognition by France and England will assume such urgency that decision must ensue. These assertions regarded in England as utterly untrue.

The short time movement in Lancashire continued to make progress. Mills in various parts were reducing their time to three days per week, and in numerous instances an entire suspension was taking place.

manifesto to the Governors of the States, relative to fortifications, &c.

In another article the Times exposes Lyons bad grammar, and says the English side was sagued exceedingly ill, and the American and with much ability, but the only result was to entirely convince it that on their own showing the acts of the American Government were illegal as regards American Givernment were illegal as regards American citizens, and a violation of the rights of nations as regards foreigners.

The London Herald says that Lyons has exposed England to a rebuff without the right to resent it, and compelled her to listen to a proclamation which means defiance to England. It then attacks Earl Russel for his impertinence in lecturing on the American constitution, and quietly enduring robbery and outrage, and says he will find he has drifted into war.

The Post says that Seward has wantonly added another to many differences which he wishes to perpetuate between the two countries.
