After his third marriage the second wife filed an application to have the decree of di-vorce opened so that she could come in, claiming she had been deceived in the nature and prosecution of the proceed-ings between her and her former husband. Pending this application the tlid wife appeared with an application to defend her own rights, claiming that the second wife had instituted her proceedings through collusion with Price, her own husband. It appeared at the same time that the first wife was living, and the re-feree, to whom the matter was submitted, I shall, if elected, support the present Gover inferred that the home Governmen will spare no efforts to save its subjects in India from the cruel catastrophe which is now impending over them. The Viceroy and his Licutenants have joined battle with the famine, supported by the unanimous voice of the English peo-pounded, and with a machinery of ad-ministration unsurpassed for ability and experience, the combat between the British Rule and the Famine is not to be spoken of as desperate. Aiready the na-tives are said to be consuming the unripe crops, which clearly indicates that the pinch has actually begun. The present, therefore, is considered the il ne for the Government to begin the task of setting Bengal to work in developing the roads, the tanks and the canals of the interior so that the village may earn food by bear-ing part of the labor, and the people be kept from the double fatality of quitting their homes, and sinking into the condi-tion of bodily incapacity. After March native rice vessels will no longer brave the ocean, and in May the rural villages of Bengal are practically eut of from the main lines of traffic. Now, therefore, is the time when the Government considers that it ought to be buying and bringing in quictly every thousand tons of foreign i.ce on which it can lay hands, and to be passing them up by rail, river and road to all the central towns. The rice reaped in S-p-tember is what Bengal lives upon; half of thing short of the millious steriling spent in grain and in local relief wor's will save the people of the vast district from star-vitories only one thing that could possi-by justify the depopulation by famine of a single village, and the twoice of the Eng-bility to buy food in the United States.
