

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

OPEN DOORS FOR THE WOMEN OF TO-DAY.

Many women must work—Relative proportion of women who are wage-earners—The law of labor applies to woman as to man—Every woman should learn the art of money-making—Glaring faults in educational methods—Woman's education hitherto mainly literary—Not broad enough, or deep enough—Women trained to dependence—The better views of to-day—Women who are content with mere passive existence, idlers, pleasure-seekers, etc.—Every young woman should be mistress of some field of learning, some art by which she can win her way—Free to accept or reject marriage—Views of Mary A. Livermore—Dr. Talmage's plea for practical education of girls—What doors are open to women—Outdoor labor, its hardships and advantages—Female farmers—Blessed exemptions from sickness—Horticulture and floriculture—Domestic service—American women averse thereto—Unsatisfactory on both sides—The servant of the future—Women not as highly paid as men for the same service—The reason therefor—School-teaching—Woman's superior native qualifications for teaching—Unjust discrimination against lady teachers—Clerkship, telegraphy, phonography, type-writing—Long hours, small pay, and great temptation—Thorough qualification necessary—Length of time required—Civil Service open to women in United States and Canada—Forms of application and methods pursued—Course of study and examination required—Letter from Hon. J. Carling—Art work, and woman's native ability for the same—Famous lady artists—Large numbers of women earning a livelihood by Art—The one great difficulty in woman's way—Art teaching by women—Demand for teachers, and remuneration thereof—Home decoration—Designing—Engraving—Medicine—Women the natural guardians of the race—A wide door of usefulness now open to woman—The Foreign Mission field—School-teaching—"I love God and little children"—Other doors rapidly opening to woman—Woman coming to the front—The secrets of success the same in woman's life as in man's page 31

CHAPTER II.

WOMEN AS WAGE-WORKERS.

The work of education rightly begins at home—The true woman is never satisfied by living for herself—A full fountain will overflow—Many women must be bread-winners for