

was therefore determined to keep Quebec at all hazards, and measures were immediately taken accordingly.

A staff was appointed, and such works as required the most immediate attention were entered upon without delay.

Brigadier-General Murray was appointed Governor, and Col. Burton Lieutenant-Governor, with such other staff officers as are usual in British Colonies.

---