36 Lots of smaller value.

Each lot, moveable or real estate, so given in prizes, is warranted to be worth the amount of the above valuation. Offers are made to all winners to pay their prizes cash, at the price above mentioned, less a commission of ten per cent. on the lots of the first series, and without any commission on the lots of the second series.

All the properties mentioned, the largest lot excepted, are located either in Montreal or in the neighborhood. The winners will be at leisure to take immediate possession of them, or their value in cash according to the stipulated offers.

The Secretary keeps no register showing to whom the tickets have been sold, as the tickets are liable to change hands, being in that respect like bank notes. The prizes are paid directly to the actual ticket bearers, on presentation thereof, and not otherwise; so that if lost the finder may claim payment of the prize, which the management could not possibly refuse. The prizes will be paid from and after the 15th November to the bearers of tickets bearing winning numbers. The ticket can be sent to the Secretary in a registered letter. The prize will be sent immediately to the given address.

After six months from the date of the final drawing, unclaimed lots will be forfeited for the benefit of colonization.

In order to ascertain whether your ticket has won a prize, you must first see whether it is mentioned in the official list, taking care not to confound the series. If you hold a $1.00 ticket, you must then look to the list of the first series; if a 25 cts ticket, you must then refer to the list of the second series, and the prize appearing opposite such numbers is that to which you are entitled.

MODE OF DRAWING.

The mode of drawing lots is a very simple one and the one most approved of by the public. Within the interior of an immense revolving barrel are placed one hundred thousand cartridge shaped brass tubes, each containing a paper upon which is printed a number corresponding to one of the issued tickets, so that the 100,000 tubes contain the numbers of each of the 100,000 issued tickets. Into another revolving barrel of a smaller size, are put similar brass tubes each containing the designation of one of the prize lots.

After these two barrels are turned and rolled before the public, a blind boy from the Nazareth Asylum takes out one of the tubes containing a number and hands it to the chairman of the meeting, who opens the tube and calls out the number printed on the paper within; during the same time another blind boy takes also from the next barrel a brass tube containing the paper describing a lot, and thus the number drawn from the first barrel is the winner of that lot. And the double operation is continued until the second barrel is emptied of brass tubes.

This mode of drawing gives an equally mathematical value to every number and equalizes the chances for everybody.
