

SUMMER SCHOOL

Last Saturday we had a friendly call from a member of the Public School Staff in Toronto.

"I come into contact with a number of teachers who are attending the Faculty of Education," he said, "and I always put in a good word for commercial training. Furthermore, I always advise them to patronize your school."

We thanked him and ventured the opinion that it was very kind of him to do so.

"It is not a matter of kindness," he continued, "but of simple justice. I know that a commercial course has helped me to a better position. I got my Commercial Specialist's Certificate by attending your Summer School for two sessions. I know, also, that there is no other place where that kind of work is being done."

It is just that kind of thing that has made this school what it is—thorough work on our part, and the simple justice of a fair recognition of it from our students.

Since that teacher was in, we met a former student who is now with the Hydro-Electric Commission. Before coming to us for a business training he had taken his degree from The School of Practical Science. He expressed his admiration for what his experience has shown him is the thoroughly practical nature of our work.

We are dealing with the very best class of students and satisfying them. We can do the same for you. When you take a summer course you might just as well take it at a school which is actually getting tangible results.

MECHANICAL EFFICIENCY SUPPLEMENTED BY EDUCATIONAL EFFICIENCY

From the time when the Wisconsin log comes to us from the woods not far distant from our plant, to the time when the last nail is driven into the crate that carries a piece of Kewaunee Furniture to some school—every operation is the result of the most painstaking and intelligent preparation.

Our designers, superintendents and workmen take as much pride in every article that leaves this plant as any instructor can possibly feel in the student that goes forth, thoroughly trained, from his school.
