Patriotic Address at Griffins

(From Thursday's Daily)

The presentation of Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter" at the Griffin opera house provided a large audience for the speaker appointed by the Patriotic League for Thursday night. Mr. H. Sneyd, after thanking the management for the opportunity granted so readily, quoted from the stirring appeal made by the King for more men and showed that fifteen millions of war, the blood-stained villages of Belgium, and the recent murder of Miss Judith Cavell provided sufficient reasons why every available young man should at once enlist to fight for his King and Country, and avenge the death of his fellowmen.

Men, women and children were called upon to do all they could for the Empire, the older men were shown that they would be useful in the militia reserve, thus letting a more active man go to the front, the women were asked to roll bandages, and the children also. An interesting story was told about a little Belleville girl who made a scarf last spring, and sent it in a bale with a letter attached, giving her address. Yesterday she got a letter from Trooper Wedge, 8th Ontario Mounted Rifles, who now in a hospital in England, after being wounded at the Dardanelles.

This young New Zealander who happened to get the scarf thanked her very cordially, and sent his address in Dunedin, N.Z. The speaker closed with these words: "Canada has done splendidly, but we can all do more, and I feel certain that a wave of activity is now sweeping over this country and that when the stirring times of 1914 are over, we shall all be able to look back in after years and say 'Thank God, I did my duty during the great war'."

The national anthem was sung by the last party, and was followed by the well-known figure of Annette Kellerman appeared on the screen.

Ankle Sprained

Mr. John Patterson, the popular Front Street ticket agent of the Canadian Northern Railway met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. He was alighting from the express wagon when his foot landed upon a stone and turned over. The result was a badly sprained ankle. He will be compelled to take a short holiday for several days to come.

Lightning

Last night in the southern sky there were many vivid flashes of lightning. The weather-wise inform us that this is an indication of a late, mild, open fall season. The lightning appeared to be from a passing storm cloud.

Compliments Grand Trunk Pacific

Mr. Arthur J. Selridge, attorney-at-law of Boston, writes to the Superintendent of the Grand Trunk Pacific Dining and Sleeping Car Service as follows:—

"I desire to compliment you upon the excellence of your dining car service. Both the service and the meals were better than that of any dining cars on which I travelled from Boston to Boston, although I used the best known limited trains in America on my outward trip to the Pacific Coast. While I was on the dining car from Prince Rupert to Jasper, I felt I never before had so much attention and excellent service. When I got on the dining car at Edmonton, I found that, if possible, the steward in charge was even more attentive and careful."

Recruiting Appeal at Palace Theatre

(From Thursday's Daily)

Last evening an appeal on behalf of recruiting was delivered in the presence of many young men by Mr. Chas. S. Clapp, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League.

"I would not have come here if I had not done something for my country. I know something of what it means to go to war," he said referring to his campaign in the Northwest. "I can feel something for the men who hesitate and I can appreciate the situation of mothers who falter to let their sons go. But do you think what young men out there by the thousands are doing for you? Almost every letter from the front contains some suggestion as to 'What are the young men of Belleville thinking about?'"

"I come here to appeal to you young men to come forward to be of some service to your country. You must be prepared to give up the comforts of home and face perils. What would be the result if we were under German domination? All of us would have to serve."

"Would you like to see Canada dominated by this militarism?" asked Mr. Clapp, who pointed out its characteristics in the streets as perpetrated in Belgium and in executions such as that of Miss Cavell.

The Empire is in dire peril and her greatest need is men. She is facing her greatest foe in history. Men are not coming forward anywhere as the authorities would wish. The married men at the front are out of all proportion to the single. While you are peacefully enjoying this entertainment, thousands are fighting for us. "I hope you young men will come forward and don the khaki for your country's defence."

Mr. Clapp's remarks were listened to with deep interest. He has been a member of the Northwest Recruiting League, and the Long Service medal.

The speaker paid a tribute to the theater management for the privilege accorded the Speakers' Patriotic League.

Presentation of Shetland Pony

The presentation of a pony in a theater is an unusual event, but such occurred in Scott's Palace Theater last evening. The large auditorium was crowded and many a boy was at the front, his deepest interest being in the presentation of the Shetland pony. Mr. Scott, proprietor, has been conducting a Kitchener Pony contest and last evening the award was to be made. The competition in the two classes narrowed down to two—Trotter, Leo DeMarsh, won out in the pocket selling and captured the handsome little Shetland pony which has proved to show its pedigree to the standard. Mr. Scott has carried out his pledge to the full and Master Leo DeMarsh recognizes this Leo had 297,000 votes.

The presentation was made by Mr. C. S. Clapp on behalf of Mr. Scott and Master DeMarsh took charge of his little horse amid the applause of the audience.

Safely Arrived in England

Lieut. H. L. Wallace received a cable from his brother, Corp. Chas. M. Wallace, advising that he had arrived safely in England. It had been arranged before sailing that Corporal Wallace was to send a cable on behalf of the rest of the boys who went from here, so that all friends and relatives would know that they had arrived.

Corp. Wallace belongs to an overseas detachment of the Army Service Corps and with him are the following Belleville boys, Cyril McKride, Walter Bedgley, and William Garrison.

They sailed from Montreal on the C.P.R. steamer "Metagama" on Saturday, October 16th, and were given rousing send-offs at Niagara, Toronto, Kingston and other points along the line.

There were also on the boat, the overseas draft of the artillery from Barriefield and a number of Belleville boys were among them. We regret at the present time we have not a complete list. Among them were: man and Wm. Riggs of this city were among the number.

A Ready Weapon Against Pain.—There is nothing equal to Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil when it comes to penetrating the tissues and pain disappears before it. There is no known preparation that will reach the spot quicker than this magic Oil. In consequence it ranks first among liniments now offered to the public and is accorded first place among all its competitors.

Attended Convention.

Dr. Dormer returned this morning from Toronto where he had been attending a convention of Osteopaths of Ontario. There was a large attendance and a very interesting program. Several American authorities in the Osteopathic field gave valuable addresses.

Miller's Worm Powders prove their value. They do not cause any violent disturbances in the stomach, any pain or griping, but do their work quietly and painlessly, so that the destruction of the worms is imperceptible. Yet they are thorough, and from the first dose there is improvement in the condition of the sufferer and an entire cessation of manifestation of internal trouble.

Reception to Grand Chapter Officers

LA-OL W. N. Ponton, was in Toronto last night attending a meeting of the Grand Chapter of Canada of which he is chairman of the executive. The occasion of the meeting was a reception tendered to the Grand Chapter Officers by the officers of the Grand Chapter of Ontario. Mr. Ponton was the speaker of the evening, and as it was Empire night the addresses were of a patriotic nature.

This morning Mrs. Ponton was delighted to receive a great basket of beautiful flowers which the Grand Chapter officers had sent to her, quite unknown to her husband.

Slump in Recruiting

Local recruiting officers say there has been during the present month a most decided slump in recruiting. They are quite at a loss to account for it but the figures give forcible evidence of the fact, so far this month only twenty-two men have been accepted against an average of nearly eighty for several months past.

Recruiting centers elsewhere are reporting somewhat similar conditions.

Charged With Causing Death of Daughter

Peterboro, Oct. 28.—This morning Grandfather and Mrs. Lindsay of Dummer township were arraigned before County Police Magistrate Langley charged with murder in having caused the death of their fourteen-year-old daughter, who died on September 17 from the result of a criminal operation, according to the finding of the Coroner's jury. Shortly after the inquest Lindsay changed his name and with his wife left the district. They were traced to Cobalt, and afterwards to Haliburton, where they were arrested by County Constable Archie Moore after a chase of 150 miles. They appeared in court with three children, who were placed in charge of the Children's Aid Society, and the parents were released.

Police Notes

The impermissible calm in police circles still prevails. It begins to look as if Belleville were as well governed as that crooks keep away and our own citizens are all so well behaved that their supervision becomes a sort of formality.

All the crimes of the past twenty-four hours were summed up in the statement that one youth had been seen riding a bicycle on the sidewalk, and that some tramp had been reported around the old cemetery in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk depot.

80th Wants 250 More Men

Word has come from Col. Ketcheson that the Department has permitted the company of 250 men recruited at Peterborough to remain there. It will therefore be necessary to recruit another company to bring the battalion up to strength, and active steps will be taken forthwith.

It is expected that not more than 500 men will come to Belleville but these two base companies will probably be recruited to full battalion strength during the winter.

One company will be left at Napoleon. The coming factory there is being fitted up for their accommodation. Another company goes to Picton.

LONG HONOR ROLL OF FIGHTING NOBLEMEN

Many Aged Peers Mourn for Soldier-Heroes—Losses to Literature, Sport and Philanthropy

Long indeed is the list of British noble families in mourning for members on the war's Roll of Honor. The Duke of Wellington has lost his second son, Lord Richard Wellesley, Captain in the Coldstream Guards, and the Duke of Devonshire, his younger brother, Lord John Cavendish, Major in the First Life Guards, while the Duke of Abercorn has lost his brother, Lord John Hamilton, Captain in the Irish Guards, and "Deputy" Master of the King's Household. The Marquis of Northampton is in mourning for his only brother and heir, Lord Spencer Compton of the Royal Horse Guards. Lord Lord Ruthven, who has two other sons at the front, is grieving over the death of his favorite boy, Captain Christian Horne Ruthven, of the Black Watch. The name and title of Lord Ruthven are familiar to all students of Scottish history. For the third Lord Ruthven, whose name is pronounced as if spelled Riven, was the principal actor in the murder of King, the troubadour favorite of Mary Queen of Scots, in the Palace of Holyrood at Edinburgh.

Then there is Lord Redesdale, whose oldest son, Captain the Hon. Clement Freeman Milford, belonged to the Tenth Hussars. Lord Redesdale is the most wonderful landscape gardener in the United Kingdom, a past master of the art, the rudiments of which he acquired in Japan, where, as Bertie Milford of the British Legion, he wrote that charming book known as "Tales of Old Japan."

Monck's Eldest Son

Lord Monck is grieving for the loss of his eldest son, who held a commission in the Coldstream Guards. The late Viscount Monck, it may be recalled, was the first Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, an appointment which he held throughout the war of the Union in America, namely, from 1861 to 1868. It was the Monck family which in the person of George Monck, Duke of Albemarle, brought about the restoration of the monarchy in Great Britain in 1660. Lord Penrhyn has lost not only his eldest son in battle, but also two of his brothers, who like his boy, held commissions in the Grenadier Guards. Captain the Hon. Andrew Mulholland of the Irish Guards was the eldest son of Lord Dunleath, while the Hon. Eric Upton of the King's Royal Rifle Corps was eldest son and heir of Lord Templeton. Lord Hardinge of Penshurst, Viscount of India, lost his eldest son in battle. He was a Lieutenant of the Fifteenth Hussars, and, although barely 31, had already won the Distinguished Service Order, while the Viscount's eldest brother, Viscount Hardinge, was bereaved of his eldest boy, a Lieutenant of the Rifle Brigade.

Scottish Masters

The Master of Kinnaird of the Royal Scottish Horse was the only son of Lord Kinnaird, well known in connection with his activities in the work of the National Football Association, and as a great London "anker." The Master of Kinnaird, Captain in the Rifle Brigade, was eldest son and heir of Lady Kinnaird, a peeress in her own right and daughter of the last Duke of Buckingham and Chandos.

Then there is Lord Stamfordham, private secretary of King George. He lost his only son, a Captain of the King's Royal Rifles. Lord Aberdeen, Lord St. David, Lord O'Neill, Lord Sinclair, Lord Macdonald of the Isles, and Lord Cowdray have all lost their sons. Lord Cowdray, who is a rejoicer in the peculiar nickname of "Satan," dating back to schoolboy days at Eton, and which he now so readily accepts that he has always a little red demon pasted in his hat in lieu of initials, has had his second son killed, while his eldest son and heir, the Master of Saltoun, is in German captivity.

BOTH KNEW GERMANY

Her Colonial Policy and Unreliability Well Sued Up

Some words spoken by General Botha afford the most opposite reply to Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg's suggestion that Germany would have been a better friend to the Boers than England. "According to the information I have received," General Botha said, "correspondence took place between the Governor of German West Africa and the Kaiser. The reply which the latter sent was as follows: 'I will not only acknowledge the independence of South Africa, but will even guarantee it, provided the rebellion is started immediately.' When one hears of such a guarantee, one is inclined to say, 'Poor Klondike! Thank God these evil designs in regard to our country were frustrated.'"

And, after giving instances of the murder and general ill-treatment of natives by the Germans in Southwest Africa, he remarked: "People with such a native policy constituted a danger to the Union, and a sore in our side, which could not be allowed to remain."

Lloyd-George's Few Letters

Mr. Lloyd-George's admission that he was "not good at letter writing" will not be news to those who have had to approach him through the post. He much prefers to discuss a point with a man personally than to reply to a letter, and of all the Ministers of the Crown he is probably the slowest as far as correspondence is concerned. Indeed, unless the point is of the utmost importance it is a matter of the greatest difficulty to get a letter from him. Autograph hunters have long since discovered this. The man whom Mr. George described as the "greatest nobleman" and "an old workman" who writes to him every day is his old uncle, Mr. Richard Lloyd, who brought up the future Minister and made great sacrifices to equip him for his career.

A sentry dog belonging to one of the French line regiments has been mentioned in despatches. By barking loudly it saved an advance post from being surprised and wiped out.

A COWARDLY HERO

Journalist Describes How a V.C. Man "Funked"

"Big crowd." I remarked to the officer in charge of the meeting. "Three or four thousand! What a restless lot they are, too!"

"Yes," with a smile. "I expect they've got wind that G—, the V.C. you know, is coming to speak." Suddenly, there was the honk-honk of a motor, a rush, and a surge. Handkerchiefs were shaken; caps flung up; a great roar of welcome went up from the swaying throng. He had come! And, before he could get to the van, all who could get within reach had seized his hand and wrung it. And then I rescued him! I put out my hand, and gave him a host to the platform. "Thanks!" he said; and the world held much.

"Give him a good one!" shouted the chairman; and they gave it. And he with the bit of bronze on his breast sat on the chair and looked as if he would give his V.C. to escape. Even under his tan he looked white as if he didn't care for this! I said. He heaved a sigh.

"Awful! Look at me!" he said, with chattering lips. "I'm shaking all over!"

"You'd sooner face the Germans?"

"Oh, them?"—with contempt.

"Rather. I funk this! Then silence fell. The chairman was speaking, but every eye was on that young V.C. And he, when the chairman said that he would soon speak to them, and tell them how he won his cross, shifted andidgeted about on the chair, and nervously looked around as if he wanted to bolt. I looked at him, and saw that his forehead was beaded with perspiration.

The chairman had ended, and, with a wave, beckoned the V.C. to the front. Cheer upon cheer rose again, mighty and heart-stirring. And that slim, pitiful figure in khaki had to face it—and them—or bolt. He turned backround once, and I could see his lips twitching. His big, brown hand—the hand which had held a rifle so straightly—plucked at a tunic button until it humk by a thread. And then he spoke, just ordinarily, with none of the rancous assurance of the thumper.

"There's chaps out there done just as much as me. I only did my duty. I've got to go back on Monday, and you can give me a bit of heart by listening, and coming out later." Not a word of his own valor! Just like Tommy! And above the riotous cheering I heard the heaved-up sigh of relief from the V.C. man. "I funk this job," he said, turning to me, wiping his forehead. "I'm a fair coward on this 'turn' not 'art!'" He drove away, a hero, and—a coward!—Answers.

FINE IRISH CHIVALRY

Thermopylae Irish Beside Feet of the Irish Guards

A writer to the London Outlook says: One of my wounded friends was enthusiastic over one that which he regarded as the noblest of the war.

at the front. He was a little fellow, the road at all costs. Most of the officers had been killed, on some were badly wounded that they could no longer lead, and the charge fell on a gray-haired Sergeant-Major, who swiftly seized a corner shop commanding two roads as an ideal place to hold up the Prussians until the British reinforcements were in safety. As he was about to place his two machine guns a woman stopped him and said, "You cannot stay here, Sergeant. There is a woman in labor in a room above." "Good heavens!" he answered, "And at such a time! Now then, ma'am, he continued with ironical good humor, "can't you tell the lady to hurry up, as she's keeping an army waiting?" "How long will she be?" The reply was, "About half an hour."

The Sergeant told of ten of his men with stretchers and blankets to wait until the child was born, then to convey it and its mother into safety, after that to return to their section. In the meantime he advanced an eighth of a mile and fortified a weaker spot as well as he could, scolding his men the while and telling them not to make too much noise, else they would alarm the "babby." And so, in a place which left them exposed to the full danger of the Prussian attack, these Irishmen fought until every man was either killed, wounded or made prisoner, rather than disturb a woman in the crucial hour of maternity. "This," cried my wounded friend, "is one of the noblest stories ever told of a war. Even Thermopylae is insignificant beside it!"

The Use of Thermite

The reason that the incendiary bombs dropped from Zeppelins throw out such a terrific heat is because they are filled with thermite. Thermite is so hot when it is fired that it will melt iron and steel with the greatest ease and even burn its way through granite. This marvelous substance was discovered in 1902. It is really a mixture of coarsely powdered aluminum and oxide of iron. It can't be fired by itself, but has to be started by another mixture consisting of finely powdered aluminum and potassium peroxide. Although it is the first time that thermite has been used in war its wonderful heating power has been made use of all over the world in iron and steel welding. Steel joints are welded solidly together in a few moments by placing a little thermite round the joint and firing it.

Periscopes on Rifles

The periscope has been found so valuable in modern trench warfare that it is being used in every case where, otherwise, a soldier would have to expose himself and risk being killed. It consists of a "dummy" rifle butt, which is clipped or tied to the proper rifle butt, and a periscope which is so adjusted that the firer can look along the rifle sights without in any way showing his head above the surface of the trench. A trigger on the dummy butt is connected by strong wire to a catch which clips the trigger of the rifle. By means of this ingenious arrangement many hundreds of lives have been saved, for the German snipers have nothing to aim at save a periscope.
