FELL OFF A TRAIN.

Hamilton, Ont., June 3.—John Goodwin, aged 42, of this city, went to St. Catharines a few days ago to look for a job at his trade as moulder. He was returning last night on a freight train, when he fell just east of the city and had both legs run over by a loaded car. At the hospital both legs were amputated below the knees, but it is hardly probable Goodwin will survive the shock.

GLITTERING PRODUCTION

Ringling Brothers Present Jerusalem and the Crusades.

Jerusalem and the Crusades is the subject of a magnificent spectacle produced by Ringling Brothers with their world famous shows this season. There are 1,200 people in the cast, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200. The music is original, and is rendered by a superb grand symphony orchestra of 100 instruments, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The scenic embellishment is gorgeous in the extreme, painted by the greatest American artists, and the 2,000 costumes worn by the vast company are of Persian make and design. The fabrics are of the costliest texture and richest coloring, and the fashions of exquisite picture effects, and classical. The days of chivalry, "when knightly was in flower," are reproduced with faithful portraiture of splendid men and women, and their exhilarating pastimes and enjoyments. The great stage is larger than a hundred theatre stages combined, and the massive settings and historical properties require a special train for transportation. Never in the history of the circus has a spectacle been produced of the magnitude and regal splendor of this Ringling Brothers' performance. All the pastimes of the middle ages are exemplified in thrilling action by strolling experts of skill and strength. Jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing contests, acrobatic exploits, equestrian trials, riding accomplishments, and many other exciting sports of the chivalric age, are illustrated in whirling tourneys. The radiant costumes and blazing jewels of royalty, its courtly dignitaries and smiling favorites; the imperial purple and sparkling gems of ecclesiastical rank; the glitter and clatter of armored soldiery; the charm of dancing girls with garlands, singing maidens and devout matrons; the shield and helmet emblazonry of mounted knights; the prismatic coloring of the swirling scenes, animated by ever going and differing throngs; the majestic march of a grand army, grand organ, blending harmoniously with fifty solo instruments; all these brilliant features and many more of fascinating importance, enliven the senses of the spectator, and make this production the most magnificent and attractive ever offered the American public. The grand pageant in honor of the departure of the Crusaders on their holy mission is a processional display in which are presented more interesting historical types, more beautiful costumes, more elaborate scenic decorations, more novel and enjoying features, and more men, women and children, and horses, than ever seen in a huge spectacle at any other time in the history of the world. The voluptuous amusement of the Egyptian court is depicted in a grand Oriental ballet. This revelling scene is beyond the power of words to describe in its actual splendor and delights. The enormous stage is taxed to its utmost by the bewitching dancers, and the tremendous assemblage of variously dressed and enchanted Egyptians. For cost of production, originality, enormous number of people employed, and overwhelming success, this gorgeous spectacle rises superior to anything of similar effort ever sprung before the human eye. In the grand street parade show day morning tableau floats, bearing national types and characteristic scenes from all over the world, will be a novel and attractive feature. All the people with the great show will participate in this free display of the wonders with the circus, and the costuming is the richest ever attempted. Forty elephants, 650 horses, 108 cages, lions and dens, 12 bands, 20 camels, 40 jolly clowns, troops of gallantly mounted soldiers, thirty riders in Easter-like finery, children's chariots, fairyland pictures, aristocratic whips, and a multitude of other distinctive features will be illuminating factors in the largest and grandest circus pageant ever organized.

Ringling Brothers will exhibit here Saturday, June 11, and give performances in the afternoon at 2 o'clock and evening at 8 o'clock. Reserved seats, numbered, and admission tickets will be sold at the downtown ticket office show day at the same prices charged in the ticket wagons on the show grounds.
