As I went down the street to-day I raw a little lad
Whose face was just the kind of face
To make a praon glad.
I eaw him busely at work,
While blithe as blackbird's song
His merry, mellow whatle rang
The pleasant street along.

Just then a playmate came along,
And leaned acrose the gate,
A ban that promised loss of fun
And a frolic to relate.
"The boys are wasting for us now,
So burry up," he cried.
My little widstier shook his head,
And "Can't come," he replied.

"Can't come? Why not I'd like to know? What hinders? asked the other. "Why don't you see," came the reply, I'm busy helping mother? She's much to do, and so I like To help her all I can; so I've no time for fun just now," Said this dear little man.

"I like to hear you talk like that,"
I told the little lad;
"Help mother all you can and make
Her kind heart light and glad."
It does me good to think of him,
And know that there ere others
Who. like this manly little boy,
Teke hold and help their mothers,

We Are Seven

I met a little cottage girl, She was eight years old, she said; Her hair was thick with many a curl

She had a rustic woodland air,
And she was wildly clad;
Her eyes were fair, and very fair;
Her beauty made me glad.

"Sisters and brothers, little maid, How many may you be?" "How many? Seven in all," she said, And wond'ring looked at me.

"And where are they? I pray you tell."
She answered, "Seven are we;
And two of us in Conway dwell
And two are gone to sea.

"Two of us in the churchyard lie,

My sister and my brother— And in the churchyard cottage, I

"Oh, master, we are seven."

And said, "Nay, we are seven."

Dwell there with my mother." "How many are there?" said I,
"If two are in heaven?"
The little maiden did reply,

But they are dead, those two are dead Their spirits are in heaven."
'Twas throwing words away, for still
The little maid would have her will,

Choice of Trees by Lightning.

Now that the season of thunder storms is here, this long debated subject assumes fresh interest. It has been rediscussed by Dr. A. W. Borthwick in "Notes from the Royal Botanic Garden

IVY POISONING.

Keep Zinc Ointment on Hand This Season.

"This is the season," said the physician, "when I do business with the small boy or the small girl, who is suffering from ivy potsoning. It is a fiendishly in ritating, although seldom a serious ailment, but if people would follow a little common sense advice they could save many doctors' bills.

"Ivy poison is like a cold—it can't be cured in a day, but it will yield more or less to proper treatment, and that treatment may be given as well at home at almost no expense os by a physician, No doctor knows of any specific for ivy poison. Cases differ in severity, just like cases of anything else, and there are as many ways of doctoring it—if you listen to what your friends tell you—as there are of doctoring a cold. Some people claim to have found witch hazel efficacious. Most gases I have seen have yield. cious. Most gases I have seen have yielded to witch/hazel about as much as they would have yielded to water. It is excellent, however, for allaying temporarily the awful, burning itch of a severe attack of poison.

lent, however, for allaying temporarily the awful, burning itch of a severe attack of poison.

The one thing which will almost always do some good is zinc ointment, five cents worth of which obtained at any drug store will suffice for a long time. Rub it on the parts affected, and keep them well greased with it. It appears to have the effect of drying up the little water blisters, which are the external evidence of poisoning.

This sounds like, and is an easy and simple thing to do. That is the trouble with it. It is so easy and cheap that most people will believe they can get quicker relief by hunting up a doctor any paying him good money for a prescription to be filled at a drug store, yet out of 100 doctors who might be resorted to a great majority would give either zinc ointment or a treatment of copper sulphate, which has exactly the same effect.

"In addition to this, it is advisable to."

sulphate, which has exactly the same effect.

"In addition to this, it is advisable to keep the blood cool, refraining from exercise, which heats and induces perspiration, while the poison is in the system. I have seen a mild case of poisoning aggravated by heated blood until it became frightfully painful and actually serious, spreading into parts of the body which had not been exposed to contact. One man, who came to me, had his ankless so swollen by blisters that he could not wear high shoes. They were twice their natural size, and encrusted thick with the irritating little pimples. I found he had been riding a bicycle a great deal, and, instead of the poison passing away in a couple of weeks, it had grown very much worse.
"One more thing worth remembering

"One more thing worth remembering is when one has the least suspicion he has been exposed to ivy, not to touch his face with his hands until he has washed thoroughly. The skin around the eyes is very sensitive to poison, and it is not very pleasant to have both eyes shut up by this valueless and noxious weed."

A Hero's Death.

Sir Coim Scott-Moncrieff senrs to the Times' a brief but moving account of the murder-of his only son, a civil administrator in the Soudan. It appears that a certain land-owner, Sheikh Abdel-Kader Mohammed Imam, had proclaimed himself a prophet, collected a band of followers, and refused to treat with the Mamur, or native administrator of the district. He sent a message, however, to say that if Mr. Soot-Moncrieff and the Mamur would come and interview him unarmed and unattended he would state his grievances. Although Abd-el-Kader's own brothers, who had been invited to attend, declined to do so, and endeavored to dissuade Mr. Scott Moncrieff, he and the Mamur decided to trust the man, and, leaving their escort a mile away, proceeded to the Sheik's encampment. According to the evidence of men subsequently taken prisoners, the Sheik, on being asked to state his grivances, replied that he had none, but that what he was doing was for Allah. He and his followers then feli on the Mamur and Mr. Scott-Moncrieff, who 'met his death fearlessly, smiling, and folding his arm, while his lips moved as if in prayer.' It thus appears that Mr. Scott-Moncrieff, who was only twenty-four years of age, worthily upheld a noble tradition, and has conferred iresh distinction on an honored name.

Then, looking round on the hundreds of women who crowded the seats. Father Vaugran said: "To the woman I would say that she must keep her home in beautiful order, and keep her temper. There is much of the animal even in the Christian man.

"Let her always be neat and smart when alone with her husband, and not merely when entertaining company. He likes to see his wife well turned-out, and it is her business to be pleasing in her eyes.
