A Purse of Gold For a Red Rose. Fashion's Crowning Glory The Hat.

A Greek philanthropic society in Pera has devised a rather felicitous plan for helping the sufferers from the recent disastrous earthquake.

A large number of young women, many of exquisite charm and beauty were busy offering a little red flower for sale. They occupied the important thoroughfares and streets of every district and suburb of the capital, and, assailing passer-by with sweet words and sweeter smiles, pinned the flowers and begged for contributions! It was impossible to resist. In this way a large sum of money was realized and sent to the Greek patriarchate for distribution among the needy.

One charming girl was especially fortunate. She saw at Yenikay, a fashionable summer resort on the upper Bosphorus, a carriage driven by a pair of beautiful horses, and asked the coachman to stop. The latter complied.

On seeing that the inmate of the carriage was no other than Prince Burhaneddin Effendi, the son of the ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid, the girl was taken aback, and stammered an excuse.

"I only intended to offer your highness a little red flower. It is for the victims," she said.

The Prince smiled and accepted the flower. He took out his purse, but found to his regret that it was empty. He then unfastened his heavy gold watch and chain then to an doffered the beauty.

"No, your highness," objected the latter. "We do not plunder, we only beg."

The prince was so pleased with the answer that he ordered his coachman to drive to his palace as fast as possible, and in a few minutes returned and brought the delighted girl a purse filled with gold pieces.

Does Beauty Bring Happiness?

Mme. Cavaliere, who is one of the most beautiful women in the world, thinks that by itself it cannot, but says that every woman has a charm — for some men. Mme. Cavaliere has been playing Salome in "Herodiate." Her marriage to Mr. Chanler, the American millionaire, in 1910, is well remembered, and recently she began divorce proceedings against him.

"Every woman is charming in some way to somebody," she said. "It may only be a turn of the head, or a movement of the hands that fascinates. It may be the languid grace with which she opens her eyes, or the merry way she closes them. There is always something. Beauty in itself cannot bring happiness; frequently it is a snare to the woman who possesses it. One cannot be beautiful for ever, and love that centres only round a woman's beauty turns to hate when she grows old.

"I have known ugly women who charmed men by their grace of manner, their high intelligence, their kindness of heart. You may say that this is little consolation to the woman hungry for beauty, but I know how little of a man's heart the woman who holds him for beauty alone.

"Charm is another thing. The man who has found out the worth of a woman knows that it is in her very being and cannot fade or change. He will take care not to lose her.

"Beauty is so dangerous because it is so overrated, such hopes are built upon it, such strength is credited to its weakness."

Black New Guinea Butterfly Worth $5,000

From London word comes that a jetblack butterfly, valued at $5,000, as big as a robin, with wings measuring eleven and a half inches from tip to tip, has been conveyed to London from New Guinea by A. L. Mock, an explorer in the service of Hon. Walter Rothschild, millionaire owner of the famous private museum in Tring Park.

Several new varieties of butterflies by far the largest in the world were discovered in New Guinea by Mock. "I had to take up from the coast," he is reported as saying, "cases of pearl shell, tomahawks and beads of all kinds before I could get the assistance of the natives in capturing the butterflies. The natives shoot them with four-pronged arrows, which they use for killing birds.

"The female giant butterflies are black or brown or white, but the males are splendidly marked in green or gold. I brought also with me a butterfly which has a hairy body on account of the intense coldness of the Snow Mountains. A couple of my native boy hunters were killed and eaten by New Guinea cannibals, who kindly sent me back the bones."
