Uneasy Feeling in the English Money Market

The Situation Really Stronger Than It Has Been for Some Time Past.

London, July 31.—Prices were weak yesterday in all departments owing to the closing out of some weak accounts and to persistent rumors with regard to an oldestablished bank doing business with Portugal. upon the nature of these the Minister of France was interrogated by Mr. Paterson, of Brant. Mr. Foster stated that all refined sugar under No. 14 Dutch standard would have to pay duty.

Sir Richard Cartwright remarked that it would be a very great benefit to the country if the standard of sugar admitted free were fixed at No. 16 Dutch standard, the same as in the United States.

Mr. McMullen drew the attention of the House to the anomalous position in which the Government had placed itself by sending a special commission to promote trade the Government had placed itself by sending a special commission to promote trade relations with Jamaica and fixing the standards of dutiable sugar so low as to exclude the products of that colony. He held in his hand a sample of Jamacia sugar which would undoubtedly grade No. 16 Dutch standard. A gentleman had recently come from Jamaica for the purpose of opening up a trade between this Dominion and the colony he represented, but he was surprised to find out that by the tariff regulations Jamaica sugar was shut out of the Canadian market.

This was not a quotation from a free trade This was not a quotation from a free trade organ, but from a paper that supported the Ministers in their protective policy. It was so significant that he called the attention of the Finance Minister to it.

Mr. Wood, of Westmoreland, let out what no member of the Government had what no member of the Government had the courage or the honesty to admit. It was the deliberate intention from the out-set to shut out Jamaica sugar because it was a clean sugar that would be used largely without refining, and, of course, largely without refining, and, of course, bought at a very low price. This would mean an enormous loss to the refiners, because poor people would use the cheap, clean sugar from Jamaica instead of the sugar of the refiners here.

matter clear, suggested an amendment which would have had the effect of confining the tax to refined sugars.

Mr. Bowell, however, would not accede to this, because he said it would open the door for all that class of bad sugar termed the low yellow, which was flooding the United States markets to an enormous extent.

Mr. Langelier remarked that Jamaica sugar was excluded, simply because it was a little cleaner than the other. It was a very good sugar, and would be sold at 3 cents per pound, and, practically, the effect of the tariff would be to discriminate against this Jamaica sugar in favor of Cuba, a Spanish dependency.

Mr. Bowell, in replying to Mr. Langelier, very skillfully evaded the real issue. He pointed out that Cuba sugar was laid down at $3 37\frac{1}{2}$ at New York and at $3 56 at Montreal, and granulated sugar was sold for 4\frac{1}{2}$ cents and at New York for 4\frac{1}{2}$ cents. The difference between the two was so light and the advantage to the country so great that the Government thought their policy was fully justified.

Mr. Paterson (Brant), questioned the accuracy of the members figures, although no doubt the Minister himself believed them to be correct. He could not conceive how the Government came to fix the standard at a figure which would exclude from Canada the sugar produced in a British colony after the Minister had gone, at great expense to the country, to open up trade relations, after sending a commissioner and an exhibit to the exposition there.

Mr. Charlton remarked that the question given to refiners was four times as great great, and British Colomy at the sugar produced in a British colony at the distinct of the country, to open up trade relations, after sending a commissioner and an exhibit to the exposition there.
