large crop, heavy falling off in exports and an enormous surplus from last year.

All reports, official and unofficial, have stimulated the farmer to the belief that later on prices would break and that the early market was the one to sell on. The American Agriculturist, however, in its forthcoming November number prints an elaborate review of the wheat situation, showing facts to the contrary.

The Agriculturist points out that exports from India are falling off and that Russian wheat is being held for an advance and that the surplus for export from Australasia and South America is very small. The world's reserve supply was by no means made up by last year's heavy yield in the United States, and the replenishing of these reserves accounts for our enormous exports and the active foreign market at present. It demonstrates that its September estimate of 500,0000 bushels is a very liberal one of the United States wheat crop of 1892, and claims that the crop has been persistently over-estimated for the past four years.

Geo. Roberts Ruined by a Fascination for Gambling.

Despondent and Penniless He Swallows Several Cunces of Laudanum— Pathetic Letter Left by the Unfortunate Man,

Unfortunate Man,

An Orillia dispatch of Saturday says: George Roberts, a commercial traveler, committed suicide here Friday night. The story of his death is more than ordinarily pathetic and shows to what lengths the fascination of gambling will lead a man. For years Roberts traveied all through Ontario for Millburn & Co., and no harder working or more popular man was on the road. He was only 28 years of age, fine looking and of splendid physique, standing over six feet high and weighing 220 pounds. He was doing well with Millburn & Co., but A FASCINATION FOR POKER PLAYING ruined him. He tried time and again to quit the game, only to find himself once more drawn to the table, till finally he had to give up his position, owing the firm, it is said, several hundred dollars. This was several months ago, and he foreswore poker playing for all time, but when in London a month ago he once more became its slave, and lost $50 at one sitting. He was jobbing in cigars for Brener Bros., London, aud came here on Friday, Oct. 21. He had $100 in his pocket and had no difficulty in getting into a little game of draw. It started in the atternoon, and wore along with varying successes till tea time, and it finally narrowed down till three others and deceased were the only players left. A few hours' play and Roberts arose from the table

A BUINED MAN.

He was around an Sunday and Monday, but afterwards kept to his room a good deal, and yesterday was not seen at all. About 7:30 James Young, one of his associates, went up to his room, tapped on the door and entered. He lit a match and the sight which met his gaze was a ghastly one. Stretched on the bed with his head to the foot was Roberts, covered only with a light guernsey. One foot was on the floor, his eyes were only partially closed, and his open mouth was covered with froth. On the dresser were a number of medicine bottles, and the chamber by the bedside gave evidence that deceased had been vomiting. Young and Dr. Ardagh was summoned. He examined the body and said death had occurred about two hours previous. As three of the bottles on the dresser were labeled laudanum he locked the room and notified Dr. Beatton, coroner, of the circumstances in connection with deceased's death. This morning an inquest was held at the Orillia House. After the jury had been sworn in and had viewed the body the coroner informed them that the deceased to the proprietor of the hotel, which he thought would probably aid them in arriving at a decision, and accordingly the seal was broken. The letter was addressed to James Haw, and was dated Oct. 27, two days previous to his death. It read.

Dear Sir,—I am sorry to cause you any trouble on account of my actions. The facts are I have been a confirmed gambler for years, to my ruin, and I have completed my destruction this trip. I started on the lowest rung of the ladder, and few young men stood the chance for success that I did, but the friendly game of poker ruined me at last. I see no way out of my young men stood the chance for success that I did, but the friendly game of poker ruined me at last. I see no way out of my difficulties, and if I did I know well that the fascination would lead me on again.

Kindly post letters for me at once. The one to my brother may reach him in due time, but I have not been in communication with him for six months. Do not waste time and money in looking up my relations, as I have done nothing for them and they are ill able to bear expense on my account. You know the parties with whom I associated here, and as they have won one way and another, about $100 from me, probably they will be generous enough to bear the expense of providing for a corner six by two somewhere in the town. I do not mean any sarcasm at heart; they are a good lot of fellows. Let my action have as little notoriety as possible if it rests with you. Again asking your torgiveness for my trouble to you. I remain, yours truly, (Signed.)

Come Before the Pelice Magistrate—Neighbors in South London Have Trouble—Ed. Cavanagh is Committed for Trial—The Alleged Seduction Case Must Go On.

Mrs. Lottle Ross and Mrs. Amelia Hutchinson are next-door neighbors in South London, but they do not agree very well. Both have young children who cause a good deal of trouble. A few days ago, it is alleged, Mrs. Ross told her little boys to throw some stones over into Mrs. Hutchinson's place. "even if they did break windows," Her orders were obeyed and two panes of glass were smashed. A few days before Mary Hutchinson and three of her icompanions were sitting on the fence enjoying themselves when Mrs. Ross came out and struck Mary over the head with an umbrella. Mary also says that she threw a clothes pole at her and struck her on the shoulder, and further that Mrs. Ross sent her son in for his father's revolver. The two last allegations Mrs. Ross denies. The cases were fully ventilated at the Police Court this morning. For breaking the windows, a fine of $4 was imposed. Judgment was suspended in the assult case, and Mrs. Ross was bound over to keep the peace.
