It was instantaneous—the doctors say pain-less. While the first cause of his death was given out as apoplexy, later diagnosis leads to the belief that it came from cerebral hemorrhage. He passed out with the happy knowledge that the sacrifices and worries and tremendous strain he had undergone as the nation's chief executive were known and appreciated. Died As He Lived. It has been said that he died as he lived—a soldier to duty. His death may be attributed directly to last spring, when only partly recovered from a serious attack of influ enza, he bravely assumed the tremendous burdens of the preside and again, only last week, when already weakened and a sick man, he insisted on "seeing through" the exhausting program arranged in his honor at Vancouver and Seattle. Few persons, if any, outside his nediate medical advisers, knew the greater shock came to his wife, readweakened physical condition of the esident when he went back to his attack of influenza last spring. It was revealed here to the public for the first time at 3 o'clock this

Mrs. Harding, through the long hours since last Sunday, had been almost constantly at his bedside, and she was preparing to obtain her first night of good rest since the presidential party reached San Francisco. Her constancy and devotion were being re-warded by the president's seeming recovery. Doctors who had been in attendance with one exception had left the hotel for a few hours of relaxation. Then death laid its cold hand on the president. The only per-sons in his apartment at the time were Mrs. Harding and two trained
