This unusual fact was demon strated by officials of the Bell Telephone Company arising out of a discussion as to the proper method of asking for a number. Quite naturally Londoners who are noted the continent over for their courtesy and politeness when calling a number, follow the number up with the word,

With the person calling the number when speaking close to transmitter, the word is very plain to the operator, but with those whoe talk several inches away from the mouthpiece, the word is very often mistaken for "three." Thus, when a person calls "267, please" the operator sometimes makes the mistake of giving the party calling, 2673, and all because the people of London are polite.
