Excepting a Few Aches None th Worse For Awful Experience.

Paris, June 30.— Joshua Sambord's life is no longer menaced by the old well in which he spent 160 hours. He was taken out Saturday afternoon at the conclusion of one of the most persistent battles with nature ever encointered. To-day he lies in the Skelly home, a few yards away from the scene of his remarkable adventure. With the exception of a severe cold, aching fimits, and a sore head, the young well-digger is none the worse for the peril of the past week. In fact, he declared Saturday, after being taken from the well, that he wanted to sit up and talk with his friends. This the doctors refused to permit. The I hysicians state, however, that he will probably be as well as usual within a week or so.

After being taken from the well ard placed in a bed the young fellow sank into a sleep from which he did not awaken until Sunday morn'a;. From the moment he was placed in bed he was carefully attended ly two trained nurses. The doctors had provided all these details the day before. While his sleep was peaceful, he no ned a great deal, and several words were uttered during his slumber that indicated that his mind was still in the cavern from which he had been so miracuously rescued. He was much refreshed, however, and Sunday, partook of a sat as he wishes.

Sasford Still Very Weak.

In spite of the extraordinary vitality he has exhibited through the terrible ordeal. Sanford is in a very weak condition. The doctors are a unit in the opinion that he was fast succumbing to the foul air and fast succumbing to the foul air and exhaustion incident to the mental and physicial strain. He could not have stood the torture another day. The story of the entoubed man and the incidents surrounding h s rescue, form one of the most amaring recitals in the history of pe uliar adventures. If there is a parallel, the newspapers of the country never heard of it. Tuesday afternoon he was working around the old well, the scene of the accident. At 10 minutes to 2 he was in the hole, when the walls caved in. Work was commenced hurriedly, and kept up with the hope of rescue, until Thursday afternoon. Then another sinking took place in the old well's surface, the tapping on the pipe from below ceased, and the people supposed the life was crushed out of Sanford They quit work and the crowds departed.

For 24 hours many men worked to release Sanford's foot. Saturday af termoon, when in the most imminent danger, the foot was suddenly release and the man hauled to the top of the well. He was safe after a hundred hours of the most agonizating torture ever endured by a human being — a torture made more refined to the top of the well.

SANFORD'S STORY.

A Bemarkable tale From the Bescued Man's Gwn Lips.

"The second cave-in left me in mighty bad shape," resumed Sanford, in telling his story, after a pause of some duration. "I was wedged in very tight to one side and was thrown partially over to one side and back to a paintul position, and my arms were fastened on my back and breast, and I was almost sufficated. I could hear the people signalling above, but I could not reach around to the pipe to tap on it. That's what made them think I was dead. I finally got hold of a piece of brick with one hand, but I was afraid to even tap on the brick lining of the wall. Every move caused the bed of sand around me to move, and I was constantly spitting it up from my throat, into which if ran through my nostrils. I used the brick to scratch on the walls with. The scratching can be distinctly heard, and does not cause vibration that a tapping does. I heard the men resume work. I kind of thought I would be saved. I don't treall the circumstance. I heard the men come into the chamber where I lay, though I could have probably gotten out a good deal sooner if I had. I feared that they would be killed, for I knew another cave-in was liable to occur any moment. I did not think I could be so fortunate as to escape death in that event.

"I heard the workmen the moment they broke through from the new well to the old one. I was afraid they would start anothet slide when I found them working above me, and, therefore, called to them not to do that. I wanted them to go lower and come in lower down. They finally did this. I tried to help myself, but could do mighty little. I felt cold at times, and I guess my circulation was bad. The first thing I asked the men to do when they reached me was to put something over my head to keep the sand from trickling down my nose and choking me. They put a hat over me, but that was not enough, and later they got the towel. Finally I got loose, one of the men reaching in and getting the brick from behind my back and them off from my chest. I helped myself a little after that, but finally we got down to my feet.

Mr. Jacob Niergarth paid a flying visit to Stratford friends on Saturday.

Arrangements have been made to have the children sing on the band stand at West Side Park tomorrow, on account of the wet weather. The children who attend the Central School will meet there and those attending the Separate School will march from their respective schools to the Market Square, from whence they will proceed to the Park.

Do Friday evening the games resulted in all the leaders in the schedule being defeated. Skip Hogg downed skip Hughes by 21 to 8; skip Bricker triumphed over skip Sterling by 22 to 8 ("Tis said a bad attack of rheumatism on the part of one of Mr. Sterling's men contributed heavily to his downfail); skip Saunders defeated skip Seagram by 16 to 14. At present skips Seagram and Sterling are tied for first place with 4 games each to their credit. Saunders and Hughes are running neck and neck in second place with 3 each, while Hespeler, Hogg, Mc. Cabe and Bricker come next with 2 each.
