Mr. L. D. Gesner packed a barrel of fruit last week of an improved seedling known as "Bent's Best," which he counted on putting in, and two hundred and ten was all he could get in the barrel. We doubt if a barrel of larger fruit will be packed in the county this season. Let us hear! If we can's get the cake we want a slice off it.

We always take great pleasure in reading the Montror, especially where it speaks of large fruit and vegetables being raised by the farmers of the county, and we always like to find items of such. The building of a storm pier at Margaretville, so as to make a low water harbor, thus forming a harbor of refuge for the coasting trade of the Bay of Fundy, should be one of the public works carried on by our government next summer, and for which a suitable appropriation will no doubt be made at the approaching session of parliament.

A correspondent writing to the St. John Sun from Boston says: Large numbers of provincialists are returning to the provinces, many of them having completed farm work for the season in the agricultural districts of the state. Most of the young men who have come up from the provinces and Maine within the past year or two have hired out on farms at from $20 to $30 per month. As it is almost impossible to get work at a trade steadily here, the majority of those who leave the farm at the end of the season return home. Outside of farm employment it is very difficult to get a paying position at other work. The young women find it easier to get employment than the men, although there is no scarcity of either female or male applicants for employment just now.

Revolting Stories of the "Trial" of the Mur derers of the Chinese Missionaries.

Revolting Stories of the "First" of the surderers of the Chinese Missionaries.

London, October 10.—The Pall Mall Gazetle publishes a second letter from its correspondent in Kucheng detailing the difficulties attending communication with Foo Chow, and describing the trial of prisoners implicated in outrages upon the missionaries. When the court is ready the writer says, the second man is brought in handcuffed. He is filthy in appearance, and has the wild and gastly look of a starving man, which he really is. Prisoner opens by swearing that he was nowhere near the scene of the massacre. Then the torture begins. He is compelled to kneel with bare knees upon a coil of chain, his head is dragged back and pigtail fastened to a rack high above his head, a pole thrust across his legs, and two soldiers stand at each end of it, crushing the poor wretches knees into the coil of chain. The British consul could not stand the method of extracting testimony and insisted that it be stopped. This was done as far as the proceedings in the court room were concerned, but for an hour afterwards the shrieks of tormented prisoners could be heard coming from the adjacent room, were the tored, but for an hour afterwards the shrieks of tormented prisoners could be heard coming from the adjacant room, weere the torture continued. When the magistrates wanted to hear the confession of the tortured man, the prisoner was brought into the court room. If he held back a confession he was threatened with a resumption of the torture. This was usually sufficient to cause the prisoner to tell all he knew, rather than return to the torture chamber. Besides the torture described prisoners were beaten with bamboo sticks until their yells were most horrible to hear. One prisoner appeared in bamboo sticks until their yells were most horrible to hear. One prisoner appeared in the court room unable to walk from the beating he had received. Another was unable to kneel because his knees were broken by chain links, and the thighs lacerated by strokes of the bamboo rods. In the midst of such misery, cakes, fruits, tea and wines were served and partaken of by native officials who could not understand why foreigners present refused to touch these delicacies. The correspondent declares that the powers ought to demand justice without torture reaching the madarin promptly, as the man who works in the field. BRIEF REVIEW OF WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOM PLISHED IN CANADA IN THREE YEARS.

The scries of meetings lately held in this city by the Salvation Army was doubtless the best, taken on the whole, ever convened by the Salvation Army in the maritime provinces. It is estimated that $0,000 people attended these meetings, the Mechanics' Institute being full every night, and that during exhibition week, too. Commandant Herbert Booth conducted all these meetings. PLISHED IN CANADA IN THREE YEARS. tend school.

Capt. Robert Blair, of Bath, Me., has returned to his home after a short visit with his mother and numerous friends in this vicinity. He was accompanied on his homeward journey by Charles Hudson, who we understand has shipped with him.

Booth conducted all these meetings.

Like all other religious movements, the Salvation Army has its difficulties. Nevertheless, it is making decided progress in every department of its social and religious operations. The following figures show the army's progress since Commandant Booth took charge of the dominion three years ago: No progress since Commandant Booth took charge of the dominion three years ago: No less than 35,000 penitents have knelt at the various penitent forms throughout the dominion. The social operations have been started and are being satisfactorily carried on. Seven food and shelter depots have been on. Seven food and shelter depots have been opened and are proving highly successful. Eight rescue homes are already in operation, while the ninth will soon be opened. There is also a social farm outside of Toronto, consisting of 200 acres of land, on which employment is given to "out-of-workers." Then there is a small "Salvation navy." comprising two schooners working among the people on the rugged coasts of Labrador, and a steam yacht manned by a band of Salvationists, holding meetings in the towns and cities along the shores of the great lakes of Ontario. Progress in revenue also has been very Progress in revenue also has been very marked. The proceeds of the self-denial scheme have increased from $11,430 in the year 1891 to $21,798 last year. following, showing the enormous crop of apples in the Ohio valley:

"It may seem superfluous to speak of or call attention to the immense crop of apples in this part of the Ohio Valley, but it is a welceme fact that this community is assured of an apple crop unprecedented for its abundance and perfection, and the question is being asked: 'What is to be done with the apples?'

being asked: 'What is to be done with the apples?'

Everybody is interested, because Parkersburg is the centre of a large area or orchards, and the apples will do more to relieve the hard times than anything else in prospect. Every possible effort should be made to save all; barrels should be provided in advance, because the time is not far away when they will be in such demand that it will be difficated by the same of the should be prompt to engage the barrels which they will need. Those who have drying houses or kilns should use them to their full capacity. There are very fewe "aporators in this neighborhood; there ought to be more, as evaporating is a profitable way to save much of the fallen fruit.

this neighboreout from sections are the abundance and perfection of the apples, each tree seems to be in a state of emulation, perhaps to celebrate the centennial of the planting of the flast grafted fruit west of the Alleghanies. This is the centennial year of the close of the Indian war and of the going forth from the block houses of the early settlers to their clearings and cabins, and the centennial of the planting of the first orchards of engrafted fruits. There are very few of the original grafts standing, but their descendents are numerous and engaged in a glorious celebration."

Then and Now.

A Provincetown, Mass., paper says that twenty-five years ago the mackerel fishing fleet in the harbor of that place numbered some seven or eight hundred sail and that their appearance was of a vast branchless forest. Now, it is said, it is a rare thing to see even seven or eight vessels at anchor there and a hundred sail is more than the total of the entire New England mackerel fleet.

Altogether too much prominence can be given to the movements in Europe connected with the forcing of Turkey to accept the ideas of the western nations in regard to the government of the Armenians. It is not likely, in spite of the dispatch of a large force of the British navy to the Dardanelles, that war will come out of it, for one reason that the British government will make it as easy as possible for the Turk, in view of the fact that Russia is ready to pounce in and carry out reforms after her own methods. British statesmen have more than once pulled chestnuts out of the fire for Russia, but they are not likely to do it again in a hurry.

Ample time will be given for the government of the Sultan to digest the new scheme proposed, and much allowance will be made for existing conditions, of which, it is safe to say, we know very little. It is not unlikely that the reports of the mixed commission are minimizing many many stories of the Armenian horrors, so-called, and that this has an effect on the negotiations.

The report that Turkey has sent for M. Turpin to bring along his invention of melonite, in order to fortify the Dardanelles, may be taken with a very large grain of salt. M. Turpin has been proved to be a humbug, and his invention as a valueless one by his own government. It is not likely that France would let an invention of the character which M. Turpin claims be peddled among foreign countries, if it had any value; nor is it at all likely that the Turkish government would trust such an important matter to a man whom his own government repudiates as a mere crank. The people who would fry the Turk for a fool are likely to lose their fat in the operation, and so are those who are ready to claim that the Turk is easily frightened.
