

rich in her poets. They stand in the vanguard of a country's benefactors, and so should be cherished and encouraged. Of late our serial literature has given us more than blossomings. The present volume enshrines some of the maturer fruit. May it be its mission to nourish the poetic sentiment among us. May it do more —nourish in some degree the heart of the nation, and, in the range of its influence, that of humanity

CANADIAN MONTHLY OFFICE, }
Toronto, December, 1880. }
