Correspondence.

To the Editor CANADA LAW JOURNAL :

I enclose a clipping from a country paper which, after giving name and address, reads as follows : " Member of Law Society of Ontario, will execute Mortgages, Deeds, Wills, Leases, etc. Moderate charges. Satisfaction guaranteed. Office and Residence ———." There are two features which are somewhat new in the advertisement ; one is that the advertiser is " a member of the Law Society of Ontario." Possibly this may be somewhat different from the " Law Society of Upper Canada," but the names are sufficiently alike to provoke enquiry. Then again, most of the advertisements I have seen of this kind stated that the advertiser was prepared to draw documents of all kinds, for moderate charges, and to guarantee satisfaction. This gentleman goes a little further and says that he is prepared to "execute" them on the same reasonable terms.   Yours,

READER.

Law and Practice in Accident Cases, by CHAS. C. BLACK, author of New Jersey Law of Taxation. Newark, N.J.: Soney & Sage.   1900.

This is an enlargement of a previous book known as Proofs and Pleadings in Accident Cases. The writer states his object to be to produce a practice book in distinction from standard works on the law of negligence, a book that would render assistance in bringing, maintaining, and defending accident cases in the Courts, and which would be useful for ready reference at the trial. It includes a statement of general principles, with short treatises on actions and parties thereto; pleadings and forms ; evidence and proof; damages for personal injuries and for causing death : questions of law and fact; contributory negligence; fellow servants, etc. In these days when accident cases form so large a portion of litigation in all our Courts, every assistance that can be had will we welcomed by the profession, and the volume before us, which contains over 700 pages, will be helpful in this country, though a comparatively large portion is devoted to forms of pleadings and practice inappropriate to our precedure.
