

It is the most natural thing in the world that two such countries as ours should have found a great potential for ongoing co-operation and collaboration in such crucial multilateral undertakings of our time as the "North-South Dialogue" in all its forms, in the law-making, peacekeeping, arms-control and disarmament activities in the United Nations family of organizations and in a wide range of other significant organizations and conferences. Even with respect to international activities not directly related to governmental positions or foreign policy issues, it is interesting to note that Innsbruck has just hosted the 1976 Winter Olympics, while Montreal will soon be hosting the 1976 Summer Olympics. I have no doubt that in the purely bilateral field, as well as in the multilateral field, there exists a potential for a fuller and even more intensive co-operation than that already realized, and I look forward to the achievement of those objectives.
