DUNCAN BLAMES CURLEY FOR DELAY IN ISSUING WARRANT FOR NESBITT

After both the commissioner and the examiner had again attempted to obtain an answer from him in regard to the destination of the cheque, the banker withdrew with his counsel, Harley H. Dewar, to the hall to get legal advice on the subject.

Mr. Dewar returned.

Mr. Travers desires me to state, said Mr. Dewar, that anything he said was not in reference to Mr. Curley, and referred to another witness.

The commissioner thought that the manager should tell about it any way, so that they could decide if the money was taken from the bank.

He said that while he was not suggesting it or stating that anything of the kind would happen, at some future time an application might be made to get the prisoner's sentence shortened and his release to answer the questions at the royal investigation might prove a barrier to the granting of any such thing.

Mr. Dewar objected to Mr. Williams' remark, and said that while Travers was being requested to answer by people to whom his replies would be beneficial, the banker had decided to remain mute.

"I don't think, Mr. Commissioner, that you should have made that remark," concluded Mr. Dewar.

Sir William: "I made the statement and I think it was improper for you to make any comment on it."

Recalled Travers said that, although Inspector Duncan had mentioned a name to him as the probable recipient of the cheque for $2000, he was on the wrong track, and the manager did not propose to correct him.

Mr. Carmichael of Hastings, representing some of the subscribers, addressed the commissioner, toward the close of the session on the cause of the failure of the bank. He desired the report made to show that had Mr. Dewar taken notice of the reliable information he received warning him against issuing the certificate, the loss to the subscribers would not have occurred.

Fielding Criticized.

The solicitor severely criticized the ex-minister of finance for not conducting an investigation into the foundation of the institution, before he granted the charter.

It was pointed out that the foundation of the institution, before he granted the charter, was a result of the alleged carelessness of the treasury board and finance department in not having been the letters written about the decision practised in founding the bank.

Mr. Lyon called.

Stewart Lyon, associate editor of the Toronto Globe, was called to the stand and examined by Mr. Hodgins. His attention was called to the fact that the Globe newspaper had published copies of certain letters respecting the provincial deposits in the Farmers' Bank, before such letters had ever been otherwise made public or produced at any trial or hearing.

Mr. Lyon said that he personally had seen these letters and had taken copies of them from a file in the possession of Inspector Duncan. He had been informed that there were letters in the possession of Mr. Clarkson, the liquidator, which indicated that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt had been virtually helped out of the country, instead of being detained and placed under arrest by the Ontario Government. He thereupon went to Mr. Clarkson and asked for access to these letters, but his request was refused.

Saw Correspondence.

Mr. Lyon then said he got in touch with Inspector Duncan thru the report of the inspector's shoulder and copied and memorized the letters which I deemed important. The inspector was pretty hot under the collar at the time and said that he had been shamefully treated by the Ontario Government, which had sent him on a fool's errand to Muskoka.

admit that I encouraged him to talk and quite possibly in his excitement he was more communicative than a detective is supposed to be."

Mr. Hodgins called Mr. Lyon's attention to the fact that on the day named, the trial of W. J. Lindsay was on and that the file of letters referred to could not have been brought to the city hall for the purpose of being used by the crown in that trial. "Is it not a fact," he said, "that you induced Duncan to take advantage of this trial being on to get possession of these letters and bring them to the city hall for your inspection? Were you not the motive power?"

Mr. Lyon: "If I was the motive power, I was more efficient than I supposed myself to be. I thought the papers were to be used in the court."

One by One.

Counsel and the commissioner questioned the witness respecting the fact that he had looked over the inspector's shoulder in examining the letters, and asked whether he supposed that Duncan did not know what he was doing.

Mr. Lyon said in reply that he and Duncan were closeted for at least 20 minutes, Duncan had a number of letters on file and turned them over one by one, permitting the witness in that way to inspect them. Mr. Lyon was quite positive, however, that the mysteriously missing cheque for $2000 supposed to have been expended for influence at Ottawa in obtaining the certificate of the bank was not among the papers he saw. Neither did he see the alleged letter from Col. Matheson to Travers, which Travers and Duncan saw on file and which was in reply to the draft letter from Travers to the provincial treasurer above referred to on the Globe, who did the police assignment, with the result that (Mr. Lyon) met Inspector Duncan at his office in the city hall about a year ago and saw the correspondence in question.

Mr. Lyon continued: "I looked in which Travers referred to loans made to Beattie Nesbitt and The Toronto World, and to assurance given to Nesbitt's friends that additional deposits would be made by the province. Detective Guthrie stated that no reporters had access to the papers of the
