The Daily Hint From Paris

A YOUTHFUL PARTY DRESS.

Perhaps not designed with that purpose, this little dress suggests springtime in color and texture. The foundation dress of china silk, is faintly tinted with pink, which shows thru the sheer milk mull, of which the dress is made. Ribbon roses and foliage, in natural colors, are used as a trimming. The foundation extends only as far down as the knees on the skirt. A girle of light blue gauze ribbon, showing tiny crystal drops, is tied in front and finished with roses at the ends.

and the best wishes of a large circle of friends will go with him and his bride to their new home.

At two o'clock Wednesday afternoon Knox Church was the scene of one of the prettiest weddings which has taken place in Woodstock for some time, when Mildred Irene, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ball of that town, was united in marriage to Frank Talbot Malone, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Malone of Toronto. A number of invited guests, including the relatives of both contracting parties, were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. R. B. Cochrane, pastor of Knox Church. The building was beautifully decorated for the occasion with white chrysanthemums, palms and ferns. To the music of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Miss Calla Hall, the bride party entered the church. First came the ushers, Mr. Fawcett Reid and Dr. Harold Ball, both of Toronto. Following them were the bridesmaids, Miss Eleanor Hay of Owen Sound and Miss Agnes Levan, gownned in pale blue satin with overdrapes of tulle and trimmings of shadow lace and brilliants. They wore large hats of blue velvet faced with black and with large pink velvet roses on the brims and carried shower bouquets of pink roses. Then came the maid of honor, Miss Frances Bailey of Philadelphia in an exquisite creation of pale pink satin with lace and opalescent sequin trimmings. Her hat was of black velvet with magnificent plumes and she carried a nosegay of pink roses and lily of the valley. Last of all came the handsome bride, who was brought in and given away by her father. Her magnificent wedding gown was of soft white satin, made en train, and trimmed with rose point lace and beading. It was arranged in most becoming cap effect with a wreath of orange blossoms and clusters of brilliants, and her bouquet was of bride roses and lily of the valley, long streamers of lilies reaching to the hem of her gown. Mr. Gerald Malone of Toronto, the groom's brother, acted as best man. During the signing of the register Mr. R. M. Mueller rendered a solo with splendid effect. After the ceremony a reception was held at the house of the bride's parents on Drew street, which was also artistically decorated with white flowers and greenery. Mrs. Ball received the guests, looking very handsome in a beautiful gown of mauve and white brocade satin draped with mauve and black lace with purple and white tulle and a large black and white veil, also touched with the same vivid color. Mrs. King, the groom's grandmother, was in black satin with real lace trimmings and a handsome ostrich feather stole. Miss Margaret Ball, the bride's sister, looked very pretty in a dress of yellow satin with tulle overdrapes and a large moleskin hat. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Malone left on a honeymoon trip to New York and Atlantic City, the bride traveling in a smart tailored suit of blue and white and a purple hat trimmed with ermine. On their return they will take up their residence in the Hamilton Court Apartments, Avenue road, Toronto. Mr. Malone was formerly a student of Woodstock College and is well known here.

The Nursery

Self Conscious Children.

If you would keep your children real children, do not parade their accomplishments and attainments before your friends. If your young son learns a poem by heart, don't allow him to recite it to every caller. If little daughter has a sweet voice and sings a popular song very well, let her sing it as often as she will to the family. It is hard for a mother to realize how extremely uninteresting the rest of the world is in her children's small attainments.

Do you remember how the showing off of juvenile talent used to bore you before you had young wonders of your own? Then, it is not good for the children. They become precociously smart and forward when they ought to be sweet and unconscious of themselves. Their dispositions suffer to satisfy your natural pride.

I heard of a little girl, an only child of exceptional ability, who was quite ruined by her parents' vanity. Katherine was continually writing poetry. Most children attempt that at some time in their existence, and Katherine's poems were like the rhymes of other children.

But Katherine's poem must be read to every relation she owned. The child became conceited and priggish, and instead of playing and enjoying fun like other children, she crouches over a desk writing poems or reading books she cannot understand.

Of course, I think that is an extreme case, but there is a warning in it. Nothing is more delightful to both children and parents than an exhibition of real talent, and there are times when it gives pleasure and profit to include others in the family audience; but avoid going to the extreme, for in children's sake, and for the sake of your friends.

Dishwashing Only Once a Day.

Of all the necessary things in house-keeping the one most disliked by the average woman is dishwashing.

Times without number your hearth has been the scene of the washing dishes. "If it were not for washing dishes I would not mind the work."

Yet this need not be such a dreaded task if you will step aside from the beaten path and wash the dishes only once a day.

Unless you have a large family who require a quantity of dishes at each meal this is not only practicable, but a big time saver, according to The New York Press.

Have ready two good sized dishpans, and after each meal scrape from the dishes to be washed, empty all liquid from cups and glasses and stack the dishes carefully in the pans, putting the large plates in the bottom and smaller ones on top.

In the second pan put all small pieces, vegetable dishes and small plates.

Stand the silver upright in a jug or pitcher and pour over all enough very hot water, in which a good soap powder or a little washing soda has been dissolved, to cover.

Now let the dishes stand in these receptacles until the morning, when work is easiest.

Always Neat.

There are many girls who, without being at all good looking, always appear neat and smart. They may only have a small dress allowance, but with it are able to appear more attractive than girls who, with twice their amount of money, often look overdressed or dowdy.

What is the secret of this? Surely it is due to the neat girl's taste; she always puts on her clothes with care and makes a point of her appearance being neat and tidy. She keeps her wardrobe orderly and has a place for everything; her ribbons, gloves, handkerchiefs, are never bundled into a drawer just to get them out of the way, but are carefully put in their proper places.
