ONTARIO CASUALTIES

In going from the baseball diamond to the city hall is like leaving a world where people say exactly what they mean and do exactly as they wish, to a place where folks do a lot of pretending. And there is so very much mahogany trimming and flowers in cut glass vases that an ordinary citizen almost gets the blind staggers trying to look unimpressed.

As for the pretending part of it, everyone in the place appears to be rushed to death with work, but you know that they cannot be, because if they were there would be some result of their efforts. As it is, there is hardly anything to show for all the rushing and tearing around.

Besides that, the various people who are employed in that vast and most impressive edifice wear a look of almost sorrowful worry on their faces; in fact, they would make one imagine that the entire weight of Lloyd George's work depended upon them, whereas there are a few of them who are not st all sure where the different offices are located in the building.

Naturally, when one starts in a new tow one must get acquainted with the leading lights of the place, and so with

Between the two bridges, the tracks ought to be concreted in by Friday night; the grading for the two roadways alongside is well ahead and the concrete ought to be put down right after the track allowance. Sixty men have anything to do with them.

We are about to buy a site for the erection of our soldiers memorial hall on St. Clair avenue. The police were on the job resterday. commissioners have granted us a tag day on which to appeal to the public for funds, and we are desirous that the newspapers shall not be mis'ed as to our object, as the idea of building two halls for Earlscourt's noble dead is simply ridiculous and a waste dead is simply ridiculous and a waste of public money. ### LEASIDE IS GROWING AND HAS POSSIBILITIES

One of the lacrosse enthusiasts who burneyed to Leaside on Saturday to see the championship struggle between the Indians and St. Catharines told The World that he was impressed with the immense possibilities of the growing suburb. He stated that there were about 3,000 people at the game, which reminded him of the old days of lacrosse at Rosedale and Hanlan's Point.
"But what surprised me," he observed. "was the huge traffic by motor field and altogether it was the live-liest scene I have witnessed in some time. The government road leading in-to the munition plant is fine for motor traffic, but between the western end and the paved roadway that belongs to the city there is a hiatus of a couple of hundred yards which greatly needs improving. I would like to know why a small section should be left this way, because the greater part of the roadway on both sides is in splendid condition."
