of its universal character.

It was to hear the pleading tones of the voice of that great philanthropist, Frances E. Willard, President of this world-wide sisterhood, that 4500 people braved the perversity of the weather and assembled at the Hall. The heartiness with which sac was saluted after a speech of an hour and a half showed plainly that they were not disappointed. Miss Willard astonished her bearers by an incidental reference to the a half showed plainly that they were not disappointed. Miss Willard astonished her hearers by an incidental reference to the "past 50 years" of her life. One would hardly suspect her of being able to count back that many. She speaks slowly and clearly, but in a tone of voice whose natural treble is slightly marred by a huskiness, probably due to too much public speaking. The president, Mrs. Rutherford, in opening, called for the National Anthem, which was led by the large convention choir on the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning this greatest problem of all time of the concerning the concerni led by the large convention choir on colorening this greater the girl, and heartily joined in by all.

84, and described by the president as the oldest member of the union in Canada, made a searly audible and happy little speech, when she presented to New Brunswick, impersonated by Miss Turnbull, Hon. President of the Union in that province, the banner for lawing the largest percentage increase in membership of any province during the past year. Miss Turnbull made a fitting reply. The same graceful ceremony was gone through when Miss Finlay of Montreal presented a banner, whereon was inscribed a huge "Y," capped by the white ribbon, to Miss Whitman of Nova Scotia, the "Y's" or younger union of which province had won similar laurels.

"A White Life for Two"

Miss Willard's address on "A White Life for Two" was listened to with great interest. Following is a synopsis: Seldom has Christian woman witnessed a more memorable object lesson than greted my eyes one bright May-day in 1870, when our party of travelers was coming up the Danube. Our steamer had stopped to take coal at the Turkish town of Widdin, and then crossed over to Kalafat, a Christian village in Bulgaria. There were the unspeakable Turks in their nondescript costume, undignified attitudes and ungainly motiens; a group of men, who, if they named their wives in one's hearing at all, would beg pardion for committing such an indelicacy, and at a distance up the bank were fluttering budgets of many-colored calico, with faces and figures invisible, but the supposition being that these cowering groups were women. We crossed to Kalafat, and on the pleasant shore, circling hand in hand with songs (in which bass and soprano mangled) around a flower-wreathed Maypole, was a group of men and women celebrating some national festival.

Great Difference, Small Distance.

The difference was so great, and the disance so small, that I sought an explanation from one who knew those distant lands. It pointed out two salient objects in the andscapes of those separate shores, beween which rolled the Danube's blue, and here I saw a mosque, a church, a minaret, spire. Even in the degenerate form in October crispness in the air to hint the

The above motto, inscribed on the banner of the great Dominion W. C. T. S50 is the Price.

The president read, amid applause, a communication, which conveyed to the convention the gretings of 4000 Epworth Leaguers of Toronto. She incidentally announced also that the W. C. T. U. of Canada had one male life member, Mr. Ramsay, and that any others desiring to connect themselves with such good association might do so by paying down $50.

The remarks of the speaker of the evening were also preceded by sweet numbers from the Cariton-stret Methodist Church quartet, and by solos from Mr. Rechab Tandy.

Revelation of God's Will.

I am a devout believer in the Bible as a revelation of God's will, and always taught it in the good old days when I was a light to my great regret, being ruled out so generally, I see a blessed compensation in the development of science, that other revelation, by which, while the Bible goes out at the door, God crowds in through all the windows and shines down into this strange skylight of the human brain more clearly than He ever did before. Surely, there is no need for our schools to be godless, and no sense in it. Only godless men and women can make them such by any possibili.

London, Oct. 21.—The staunch resistance of the insurgent tribesmen when throughout the British Empire. the British forces stormed and eventually carried the Dargai Ridge of the Samana Range yesterday afternoon, as An Appeal to the United States for Funda detailed last night in despatches from Fort Lockhart, via Simla, and the ap-gagament suggest any demoralization of the enemy, who retired in good order and proceeded to construct fresh defensive works on the adjacent hills, showing that Afridiland will probably have to be conquered yard by yard.

The news of the massing of the Afridis in the Sampagha Pass and the report that they are erecting strong for tifications there is also most disquieting. The newspapers here criticize the plan of campaign, which apparently necessitates capturing the same ground twice, as the Dargai Ridge was carried on Monday only to be lett for the tribesmen to reoccupy on Tuesday. But it appears that the British force which first captured the ridge was not provided with commissariat supplies, and the difficulties of forwarding them from the base were insurmountable:
