CAMP NIAGARA WAS TAKEN BY AN ATTACKING FORCE

Thousands Attended the Sham Fight and Ceremonial Parade—Soldiers Leave for Home To-day.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, June 23.—(Special.)—Sunny skies, cool breezes and military manoeuvres drew thousands of people to Niagara Camp ground to-day to witness what they could of the tactical exercises known as the "sham fight" and to enjoy the grand spectacle of the ceremonial parade in the afternoon, in which over 6000 soldiers participated. Great interest centred in the sham fight, and it was viewed from many points of vantage on the network of roads within a few miles of the town.

The general idea was that a force of the enemy had occupied the town of Niagara and placed it in a state of defence. This force was commanded by Lieut.-Col. Delamere, Major P. L. Mason was brigade major. It was composed of nearly 2000 men and horses, comprising the Toronto Light Horse, Hamilton Field Battery, Engineers, 2nd, 24th, 44th, and 23rd Infantry Regiments, and No. 7 Field Hospital and Bearers Corps of the Army Medical Corps.

The force was entirely routed by an attacking army about twice its strength, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Mason, with Capt. Barker, brigade major, and Capt. Chadwick, A.D.C. This force was supposed to be working from St. Catharines, and consisted of the G.G.B.G., 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines Field Battery, Toronto Field Battery, eight regiments of infantry and No. 4 Field Hospital and Bearers Corps of the A.M.C.

The soldiers of the attacking force left camp early in the morning in fine fettle. Their rendezvous was at Virgil, and they enjoyed themselves there until 10.30, the time set for moving. It had been ordered that the attack should not commence till noon, and in a couple of hours afterwards the town and camp were in the hands of the invaders.

Well Planned Attack.

The attack was carried out in three columns, the left on the lake shore road, the centre on the Virgil-Homer road, and the right along the east and west roads and the river bed. The right and left attacks pressed fairly well home, but the main attack—that of Lieut.-Col. Crueshank and the Fifth Brigade—pressed the centre of the Homer-road with great success and completely enveloped the troops of the defence at that point. This force cut manded by Lieut.-Col. Applebee, got lost far away from home. Six companies were sent to Two-Mile Creek, on the Lake-road, immediately west of the town; another six companies on the Stone-road, at Two-Mile Creek; another six companies on the Stone-road, covering approaches via Panakee-road and the Michigan Central Railroad; and another six companies at the junction of River-road with road in rear of infantry camp lines, covering River-road and the railway approach to the town. The effort was made to establish connection and outposts were thrown out, forming a line from Lake Shore-road on the right to Niagara River on the left. Five companies were detailed to act as a general reserve. The defence hospital was at old Fort George and Lieut.-Col. Delamere, commanding the defence troops, made his base west of the Y.M.C.A. tent, on the camp grounds.

Attacking Movements.
Lieut.-Col. Mason was in command of the attacking army, Captain Barker, brigade major, and Captain Vaux Chadwick, A.D.C. For the lake shore attack, Col. Mason dispatched a couple of squadrons of the 2nd Dragoons, section of the St. Catharines Field Battery, the 5th Brigade of Infantry (excepting the 1st and 2nd battalions), the 2nd and 3rd battalions of the 24th Infantry, and they proceeded along the East and West roads, the half battalion entering by the grove siding, the remainder to enter by the first road east of Panakee-road. The River-road attack and reserve force included the whole of the G.G.B.G., 2nd Dragoons, 2nd Dragoons, one section St. Catharines Field Battery, 24th and 7th Regiments of Infantry, and they proceeded along the East and West roads, the half battalion entering by the grove siding, the remainder to enter by the first road east of Panakee-road. The River-road attack and reserve force included the whole of the G.G.B.G., 2nd Dragoons, 2nd Dragoons, one section St. Catharines Field Battery, 24th and 7th Regiments of Infantry, and they proceeded along the East and West roads, the half battalion entering by the grove siding, the remainder to enter by the first road east of Panakee-road.

REJECT BORDEN AMENDMENT TO READJUST DIVISION

Ottawa, June 23.—(Special.)—Most of the day in the house was spent in discussion of the Alberta autonomy bill. The alternative proposition offered by R. L. Borden with respect to delimiting the constituencies which will elect the new legislature was rejected, the government which in this case means Frank Oliver, having evidently determined to make no concession. Speaker Sutherland announced that he had received the certificate of the election of Hon. Charles Hymans, the member for St. John's, in response to a question put by Mr. Foster, asked that orders had been issued that no more locations should be allowed on government lands, charges made in connection with the matter had been investigated.

Mr. Borden declined to admit the relevancy of the figures which he had quoted. Then he proceeded to give some of the reasons for the rejection of the amendment, the legislation of the territories should have been asked to pronounce upon the distribution proposed in the bill, Mr. Borden pointed out that the Northwest legislature had only two years ago readjusted the

The Bedroom Reposeful

The comfort and satisfaction one gets out of life is largely a question of environment, and nowhere in the house is this more markedly the case than in the bedroom.

Absolute rest in a chamber, with loud, obtrusive wall coverings, or with carpets and draperies out of harmony with the general color scheme of the room, is in many natures impossible.

Almost equally disturbing is the use of ill-designed furniture of cheap factory make, with stubborn drawers, uncertain locks, and faded or blotchy mirrors.

There is no necessity for putting up with furnishings of this kind when, by entrusting the work to us, you can have your bedroom decorated and furnished tastefully and well at most reasonable expense.

Shall we estimate on the cost?

people in the northern part of the province than in the southern. Mr. Borden quite disregarded the test of the population by the census of 1901 allowing the new provinces twenty-five members for a population of 250,000, the government established a unit of 10,000 per member. Yet it was proposed to give to the Northwest Territories 100 members, the highest estimate of whose population was 5000. As to Mr. Oliver's contention, that the legislation of the territories should have been asked to pronounce upon the distribution proposed in the bill, Mr. Borden pointed out that the Northwest legislature had only two years ago readjusted the
