Fallacy of the Beaurepaire Accusations

Shown Up in a Very Strong Light.

The Government Asked "Ur gency on the Revision Bill."

Which Passed the Chambers by a Good Majority-Excitement in Paris.

Paris, Feb. 11.-The report of Mazeau, first president of the court of cassation, upon his inquiry as to the truth of M. De Beaurepaire's accusations against certain members of the criminal section of the court, consists of summaries of the evidence given by anti-Dreyfus witnesses, complaining of the hostility of President Loew and Counselor Bard toward them, and the testimony of others affirming the correct and impartial attitude of those gentlemen. The Journal Official, which publishes M. Mazeau's report, includes letters from MM. Loew and Bard refuting M. De Beaurepaire's accusation. Even Gen. Chanonine, formerly minister of war, testifies to their impartiality. There is nothing in the entire collection of documents that gives even a vestige of ground for the attacks upon the criminal section. A score of deputies have addressed an open letter to the government, declaring their intention to uphold the supreme principles of justice above all attack. The manifesto asserts that there is no necessity to deprive the criminal chamber of the court of cassation of the right of ren-dering judgment in the Dreyfus case. It is difficult to explain how the government could have been induced, by such trivial charges, to introduce the revision bill, unless it was riding for a the Chamber of Deputies yesterday by a vote of 352 to 216. There was much excitement in the chamber in anticipation of the debate on the government's revision bill. The premier has asked urgency for it. The premier said the government was prepared to take the whole responsibility for the measure. The government, he pointed out, was neither the accomplice nor the dupe of the adversaries of a revision of the Dreyfus trial, but doubts had arisen, causing fears as to whether the sentence of a section of the court of cassation was authoritative enough to satisfy and calm the nation. The bill, he insisted, was neither an emergency measure, revolutionary nor dictatorial. It was an affair which was provoking throughout the world polemics which were lacerating French

In his speech at the meeting M. De Beaurepaire declared that unless the Dreyfus scandal was brought to an end it would entail either a civil or a foreign war. Very few, however, will share this opinion, Nevertheless, the Chamber of Depu-tles is evidently in no mood for a ministerial crisis, and it is even said that the open letter to the government by M. Brisson and other prominent deputies served to increase the majority in favor of the revision bill, several of those who signed it being suspected of aiming at office. The debate in the chamber proved stormy, but uninter-Members who had signed the open letter lost courage in face of the premier's threat to bring about a crisis, and remained silent. M. Millerand's denunciation of the government proved the most prominent feature. During his speech there was so much noise that the bell of the president of the chamber, M. Deschanels, was ringing almost constantly. M. # AWFUL DISCOVERY!

Y., Feb. 11.-A shocking discovery was made at a cemetery two miles north of Pendleton, Thursday, when the body of James Rigley was exhumed for the purpose of an autopsy. The glass covering the casket was broken, and the distorted features of the corpse, the position of his hands and feet, together with a number of blood spots on his face, show-

On Wednesday of last week, after a short illness, he apparently died, and Dr. Monterey, the family physician, debeing addressed by M. Quesnay De clared that he was dead. Preparations for the funeral were immediately begun. On Saturday the funeral was held from the family residence, near Pendleton, and was attended by many farmers. During this time the supposed corpse showed no signs of life, and no one thought for an instant that Mr. Rigley was not as dead as he appeared. A few years ago Mr. Rigley took out several insurance policies on his life, and it was partly for this reason that it was decided to hold an autopsy to ascertain beyond a doubt the exact
