Effect of the Trial.
Chicago, Aug. 4.—Despite the verdict of "Not guilty" returned in the trial of the seven former White Sox players tried in connection with the alleged throwing of the 1919 world series, leaders of the sport and sport officials, including Judge Landis, arbitrator of baseball, and Judge Charles A. McDonald, who directed the first grand jury investigation, united in declaring that the sport had been purged for a generation come, and that it had been restored to the place it held before the mark of scandal fell upon it.

"Inasmuch as I was instrumental in starting the original investigation," said Judge McDonald, "I followed the case to the end and am now moved to say that the result of the trial is disappointing in view of the confessions of guilt. But the grand jury investigation and prosecution that followed put the fear of God and the law in the hearts of crooked gamblers and shady players and has purged baseball for a generation to come."

"While the club owners may have sustained some monetary loss while the trial was in progress, nevertheless I believe our national sport would have gone the way of horse racing and boxing due to the same harmful influence, had not the strong arm of the law been extended to save it."

"Buck" Weaver May Sue.
Chicago, Aug. 4.—One of the seven acquitted former White Sox players may sue to recover payment of salary postponed when suspension followed the verdict of the alleged sell out in the 1919 world series, so it was indicated yesterday when Attorney M. J. Ahern, who represented "Buck" Weaver in the trial of the players, declared his client has a legitimate claim in connection with his contract.

While rumors of other suits were heard, these for the most part were denied and it was believed that the members of the now obsolete "Black Sox," delighted with the jury's verdict, will content themselves as best they can with the aftermath verdict of those who control the game that they be barred forever from organized baseball.

"Weaver's contract," Mr. Ahern said, "was to have run through the season of 1922. He probably will ask us to bring action to recover what is due him for 1921, less what he earned this year. If successful in this suit we shall bring another action at the close of the 1922 season."

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, declared he was ready for any action that might be brought. "They have all been paid every nickel they had coming," he said.

Mack Hears From Dugan.
Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—Joe Dugan, the Athletics' rising third baseman, wrote to Manager Connie Mack from New York, announcing his intention of quitting baseball unless he is sold or transferred to another club.

Dugan walked off the field during a game here last week, refusing to play longer because the fans persisted in joshing him.

On several other occasions Dugan has disappeared for the same reason, in which province most of her relatives lived. Jim Riley, recently sold to the St. Louis Nationals, by the Pacific Coast League here, is in Terre Haute at present.

Game Tonight Worth Seeing.
The game between St. Peter's and the Commercial on the East End diamond tonight should prove interesting as both teams will have strong line-ups. Wallis Kirkpatrick will be on the mound for the Commercial, while King will in all probability perform for St. Peter's. The proceeds of the game will be utilized to help defray Hilton Belyea's expenses while abroad competing in rowing regatta.

Auburn Team Defeats Amherst.
The Auburn team from Cambridge, Mass., last evening, defeated a picked team in Amherst by a score of 9 to 1.

To Ride for J. K. L. Ross.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Earl Sande, premier jockey of 1921, will again be seen in the silks of Commander J. K. L. Ross, the millionaire Canadian sportsman, with whom he broke last October when Commander Ross, at the eleventh hour, side-tracked Sande and nominated Keough to ride Sir Barton in his historic race with Man o' War at Kenilworth Park.

Whatever may have been the reason behind this action, which caused a sensation in the racing world at the time, the Canadian owner has again engaged Sande to ride his horses when he is not otherwise engaged by his contract employer, Samuel C. Hildreth, of the Ramocas Stable.
