BOTH THE SAME

A clergyman on an Atlantic liner had to share a state-room with another man. "After a short while," said the clergy- man, "I began to worry about some val- uables I had with me, and at last I took them to the purser, saying, 'I should like to explain to you that I am very pleased with my fellow-passenger—that is—I find him a gentleman in every respect, and I wouldn't have you think that my coming to you with these valuables is to be taken as any reflection on him.' The purser interpreted me with a broad smile, and said, 'Oh, it's all right, sir; your friend has come to me with some valuables of his own, and he said precisely the same about yourself.'"

STORIES OF A FAMOUS OLD LONDON CLUB

Cocoa Tree the Haunt of Addison, Gibbon, Byron and Other Lights

NECKLESS GAMBLING

Fortunes Won and Lost—Unblush- ing Political Bribery—Is About to Affiliates With American Universities Club—Prominent Canadians Members

(Times' Special Correspondence)
London, Nov. 20.—That inimitable bird, the American Eagle, has annexed yet another "literary landmark" in this coun- try, in the shape of the famous Cocoa Tree Club, in St. James street, London, the fa- vorite haunt of Addison, Gibbon, and Lord Byron, the ancient stronghold of the English Tories, and the scene of some of the most famous gambling in the history of the town.

The Cocoa Tree Club is not, like so many other historical relics in England, to pass into American hands, lock, stock and barrel, but, while preserving its identity as one of the most high class and exclusive of London clubs, which was founded in 1790, as a temporary abode for place for American college and university men abroad, now has membership of more than 300, representing every Ameri- can state and Canadian province.

The London and Cambridge Club, in Pall Mall, said George Knowles (a. s. n. 92), the organizer and chairman of the American Universities Club, yesterday, "but we want to change our atmosphere a little and extend the scope of the club so as to include the American diary as well as educationalists and officers of the army and navy, hence the new arrange- ment."

"American travellers appreciate the hos- pitality of the Universities Club very much," Knowles went on, "and now that the affiliation with the Cocoa Tree is an accomplished fact, there is no reason why the club should not be made one of the best in London. Our Canadian mem- bers, by the way, are growing fast; among recent newcomers being Herbert B. Ames, of Ontario; Sir Edmund Walker, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; Sir William Melick, Chief Justice of Toronto; and Sir William Osler, president of the Canadian Northern Railway."

Today the Cocoa Tree Club is only less famous for the excellence of the fare ob- tainable there than for its picturesque past. Its history begins in the reign of Queen Anne, when it was the "club" of Whigs, Tories and a rival of White's, Orinda's and other famous re- ceptacles of the "best" of the "best" of the town. In the first number of the "Spectator," published on March 1, 1711, Addison extolled the "club" as "likewise very well known," says he, "at the Grecian, the Cocoa Tree and in the theatres, both of Drury Lane and the Hay- market. In short, wherever I see a cluster of people, I always mix with them, though I never open my lips but in my own club."

Early Tour Headquarters
Early in its history, the Cocoa Tree seems to have become a recognized head- quarters of the Tories for Mackay wrote to a friend in 1724, "I must not forget to tell you that the parties have their dis- tinct meeting places, where, however, a stranger is always well received; but a Whig will not go more to the Cocoa Tree or Orinda's, than a Tory will be seen at the coffee-house at St. James'."

If you would know our manner of liv- ing," he added, "it is this: We rise by nine, and those that frequent great men's levees find entertainment at them until eleven, or, as in Holland, go to tea-tables. About twelve, the best modern assemblies in several chocolate and coffee-houses, of which the Cocoa Tree and White's are the best, and all these so near one another that in less than an hour you see the company of them all. We are carried to these places in chairs (or sedan), which are very cheap—guinea a week or a shil- ling per hour—and your chairman ex- poses for porters to run on errands, as your gondoliers do at Venice."
