The charge brought against them of being rebels to the State the bishops deny. They have ever preached obedience in all humility to the temporal power in all things in which it can be rightfully claimed. There is, however, a point were such obedience must cease, for the Scripture says, "We ought to obey God rather than men." The bishops take credit for having sought to avoid the conflict which they are accused of originating. They foresaw that it must come along with the ecclesiastical bills pasted in May last. They consequently earnestly implored the Crown to withhold its sanction. The laws were, however, passed, and that without the bishops being consulted. Rather were the apos-British Perts. ARRIVED.
