DIVORCE IN CANADA

STATISTICS WHICH SHOW THE AT-TITUDE OF THE DOMINION.

Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia-Parliament Handles the Subject for the Remainder of Canada— Marriage Tie Eminently Sacred in

In the matter of divorce Canada occupies a unique position. So far as the greater part of the Dominion is concerned there is no Divorce Court. No authority can dissolve the marriage tie in Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, and the Territories save Parliament, which is required to investigate each case independently. Parliament, which is required to investigate each case independently, and pass a special Act whenever divorce is deemed justifiable. The demand for a Divorce Court comes from a small and uninfluential section of the people, says the Mail and Empire. When it was presented in Parliament a few days ago it was met with the same prompt refusal it had elicited on former occasions. It had elicited on former occasions. It happears, therefore to be the fixed policy of Canada, so far as any policy can be considered fixed, to refrain from establishing a Divorce Court, and to adhere to the costly, cumbersome, but eminently safe method that now prevails.

The marriage tie has a good strong hold in this country. There are divorces nearly every year by Parliament, and there are in certain provinces Divorce Courts, but the number of divorces is relatively small. Altogether three hundred divorces have been granted in Canada since Confederation. Thus there have been less than ten divorces a year in the Dominion, whereas the yearly average in the United States is from 25,000 to 30,000.

But the bulk of Canada's divorces have been in three small provinces Our Divorce Statistics.

have been in three; small provinces having Divorce Courts. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and British Columbia have had 229 divorces, whereas the rest of Canada has had only 71. the sets of change have been three divorces in the provinces named to every one in the rest of Canada, and these provinces do not contain one-third the population of the Dominion. This seems to indicate pretty clearly that Divorce Courts mean more divorces, and a diminished regard for the sanctity of the marriage

Further light is thrown on the divorce question in Canada by the re-cent census. This shows that there are in Canada 661 divorced persons. To each hundred thousand of popu-lation the provinces have the following divorces:

It is rather remarkable that al-It is rather remarkable that although divorce is solely within the purisdiction of the Federal authoratey, four of the smaller provinces have Divorce Courts. These, however, are the survivals of pre-Confederation times. In three of the provinces the power of granting divorces was originally vested in the Governor and his advisers. Nova Scotia was the first colony to obtain authority to dissolve the marriage tie. As far back as 1759 an Imperial Act conferred upon the Governor, or commander-in-chief, and the Exquity Council of Nova Scotia, the power to grant divorces. A year before Could not Stand Before Dodd's —Mr. Charles Gilchrist, Chief of Police here for fifteen years and affterwards Dominion Fishery Overseer, is always willing to add his testimony to the volume of proofs from all parts that Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure any form of Kidney Disease.

"I am a healthy man, Dodd's Kidney Pills have done the joh," is the way Mr. Gilchrist puts it. "When I first started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills I was in an awful state. I had been a sufferer from Diabetes and er to grant divorces. A year before

My urine was of a dark bricky color and I would suffer something awful It consists of the Lieutenant-Gover nor and five or more of his council, but the Lieutenant-Governor may depute the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to preside in his place. Since Confederation no divorce case hile passing. "I tried everything and tried the Since Confederation no divorce case has arisen in Prince Edward Island, but still it has its full share of divorced persons. Evidently Prince Edward Islanders go abroad for their divorces. Another province which has a Divorce Court is British Columbia. There the Supreme Court exercises the same powers as the English courts by virtue of an ordinance passed before Confederation. Thus at the eastern and western extremes of Canada divorce is obtainable by legal process, whereas in the rest of the Dominion Parliament reserves the power to itself. doctors but could get no help till I was advised to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have made me a new man."
Mr. Gilchrist is getting on in years but he feels young. That's what Dodd's Kidney Pills do for a man.

Biveres Centt Frepesals.

Several efforts have been made to induce Canada to establish a Diverce Court. The first of these was the despatch which the Imperial Government addressed to the Governor-General in 1859. At that time Great Britain had just adopted a divorce law, the authority having been previously exercised by Parliament, and the Secretary for the Colonies suggested that it would be advisable for Canada to enact a similar measure. This was advanced with a yiew to securing uniformity in the marriage and divorce laws of the Empire. But the suggestion was respectively pigeon-holed. Divorce Court Proposals.

the suggestion was respectively pigeon-holed.

The temper of the Canadian Parliament touching this subject was revealed in 1870 when an innocent measure making provision for the better administration of the New Brunswick Divorce Court, already established, was submitted by the Government. It was contended that the bill would be a recognition by Parliament of a Divorce Court, and therefore might lead to a general court of divorce for the whole Dominion. So strong was the opposition aroused that the Government was compelled to withdraw the bill. In Parliament the first direct preposal to establish a Envorce Court was made in 1875. The motion elimited from the Premier. Mr. Alexandited from the Premier. Mr. Alexandical contends to the contends of the court was made in 1875. The motion elimited from the Premier. Again in 1879 a bill to introduce a Divorce Court in Ontario was overwhelming-

Court in Ontario was overwhelmingly negatived.

Another effort was made in 1888 to change the Canadian policy. On that occasion Sir John Macdonald pointed to the English experience, which showed that the establishment of a Divorce Court meant the increase in the number of divorces, the corruption of society and the increasing degradation of the public mind. He concluded that he preferred a system which offered yery few inducements to the granting of divorces. To the same effect are the declarations of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the latest of which was given only a few days ago.

Canada, therefore, atheres te, its present system because it offers special impediments to divorce. We do not have to look further than the United States to obtain a living example of the consequences of cheap and easy divorce. It means that the marriage tie easily discarded is thoughtlessly assumed, and that in all the relations of the family, of husband, and wife and parent, the sacred safeguards which Christian civilization has for mineteen centuries been building up, are undermined and Advantages of Impedimente. been building up, are undermined and weakened.

T. C. Somerville of Clarke, Neb-T. C. Somerville of Clarke, Neb., writee as follows to The Toronte Globe: In your literary notes recently reference was made to Mr. Arthur Stringer's visit to England in the interests of his poetical, ventures. This is by no means the first printed evidence of his growing importance in the literary world, with which his friends and acquaintances are well pleased. I frequently recall him as a student of London Collegiate Institute, in which I was for a time an instructor. I enclose you a copy of what I believe to be his first attempt in verse. The occasion was attempt in verse. The occasion was the removal, in the spring of 1891, of my moustache, which moved Ar-thur to pen this parody, and, after showing it to his classmates, to slip it surreptiously into my everobat pocket. Instead of a possible explo-sion of wrath on the part of the dominie, who, by the way, was ten-derly referred to as "Frenchy," the effusion was welcomed with smiles, and has been cherished among other memories of my pleasant sojourn the "Forest City." To be sure, the verse is but doggered, but its authorities and the sure of subsequently did more and better work for the Institute magazine, and therein, presumably, discovered poetic talent.

Charles G. D. Reberts' Amimals.

Even when Mr. Roberts has yielded to a fad in order to keep the pot boiling—as, for instance, in his animal stories—he has introduced something of the ethereality which characterizes him when engaged on more congenial subjects. His animals do not talk like Esop's or Kipling's, but they have affections and instincts, which Mr. Roberts investigates and presents gracefully, says The Toronto Star. His love of nature, and his knowledge of its most subtle nuances; shine through everything he writes. As poet, novelist, short story teller, Mr. Roberts will always be found handling the fine tools. His is the art which pieces many little jewels together te make up a whole symmetrical and beautiful, and just large enough to be comprehended at a glance, and to be looked at again for pleasure of its shimmering detail.

Our Good Chance. Prof. Fernow, of New York, in a recent lecture at Kingston Ont., pointed out the admirable conditions prevailing in Canada for the organization of a system of forestry, owing to the foresight displayed by the Deminion and Provincial Governments in relating control of the cont ernments in retaining control of the timber lands by a system of leaving, while in the United States large tracts are held in fee simple by railway corporations and others.

Canada's Onward March. The last two years have wrought a marked change in the status of Canada among the nations. Unquestionably this change is largely an outcome of the period of phenomenal prosperity into which Canada is now entering. Already the per capita wealth of the Dominion is in excess of that of any other country in the world, the United States not excepted—New York Post.

Banish anaemia at once by enriching your blood and toning up your nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Thousands of grateful women have said that those pills have restored them after all other means tried had failed. Mrs. Josias McIlroy, of Orangeville, Ont., was a great sufferer for several years and spent much money looking for a cure. To a reporter of the Sun Mrs. McIlroy said: "Several years upo my heaith gave out completely. I was so weak that I could not do my housework. If I went upstairs my heart would palpitate violently, and some times I would faint away through weakness. My nerves were unstrung, weakness. My nerves were unstrung, and I suffered much from dizziness. I and I suffered much from dizziness. I tried many remedies, but they did not help me. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and elecided, to do so. I am glad I did for the pills soon built me up and made me a well woman. My health remained good until last spring, when I was again taken with weakness. I now knew by experience the value of Dr. Williams Pink Pills and at once got a supply. The result was as benefia supply. The result was as benefi-cial as before and I can conscienticall as before and I can conscienti-ously say the pills have done me un-told good. I am grateful for this and hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured more sickly, pale-faced girls and women than any other medicine ever discovered, for they supply new, rich, red blood and so strengthen every part of the body. They are equally suitable for men, women and children, and cure not only anaemia, but decline, consumption, indigestion, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance, and the special aliments which all women dread. These pills can be had through any druggist, or will be sent post paid at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Look for the full name on every box, so that no worthless subevery box, so that no worthless substitute may be palmed off on you.

Judicious Athletics.

College girls sometimes break down. So do society butterflies and wage workers and hundreds of other girls who have not the wisdom or experience to establish a just relation between their physical incomes and outgoes. But it is overworry much oftener than overwork that sends the col-lege girl or her noncollegiate sister into nervous prostration. Just here is the saving grace of athletics, that sugar coated ounce of prevention that prevents the bitter pound of cure. In the rush and whirl of some exercise that uses every muscle and requires each instant the judgment of an alert blue demon of worry that eats into the foundations of health. The perplexing problem is forgotten, and the player gains her poise and takes up the next tank with a freshened mind. The phyical benefits of judicious athletics almost axiomatic, but they are not all. In the education of girls the incidental lessons of college contests are not to be despised—the value of patient work for an uncertain end, the sweetness effort for the class the grateful weariness of victory and the pleasure of a just reward.-Century.
