

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

In conversation with Mr. H. R. Charlton, of the Grand Trunk Railway System, who has just returned from the "World's Fair" at St. Louis, some interesting information was gleaned regarding this largest of Expositions ever held. Many of the Eastern people, said Mr. Charlton, are under the impression that the temperature of St. Louis at this time of the year is unbearable and that the mercury reaches a high point. This impression is quite erroneous and the average for the past week shows 72 degrees. The days are pleasant and the evenings cool and comfortable. Thousands of people are now reaching St. Louis from all parts of the country and during the rest of the life of the Exhibition (December 1st) hundreds of thousands will have visited this mammoth undertaking. To avoid the crowds that will undoubtedly be there later all those wishing to see the Exposition to the best advantage should go now before the exceptionally large crowds are in evidence. The attendance is increasing every day and last Monday nearly 200,000 people passed through the gates. Another erroneous idea which seems to have gained ground is the price charged for accommodation at St. Louis, the rumor of which is unwarranted. There are hotels and private boarding houses which cater to the pockets of all classes and a letter to the Information Bureau, "World's Fair" will readily bring a list of these places. Without a personal visit no one has any conception of the magnitude, grandeur, artistic beauty and greatness embodied in the 1240 acres that contain the displays from every country in the universe and embrace the acme of perfection and evolution of liberal arts and science up to the twentieth century. To see this with one's own eyes is worth years of study and an education in itself.

His Majesty's famous Grenadier Band from England and renowned throughout the British Empire opened a six weeks' engagement at the Fair on August 29th and crowds surrounded the stand applauding lustily to every number. The night effect on the grounds with the buildings illuminated with myriads of electric lights is beyond description, and must be seen to be fully appreciated. One noticeable feature of the Exposition is the facility for the economy of the visitor's time and the saving of his strength that has been provided. Gondolas, electric launches and boats traverse the two miles of lagoons which surround the main buildings and an intramural railway reaches every part of the grounds. Rolling chairs may be secured for trips through the buildings and elsewhere, and large automobiles with well informed Guides make trips throughout the grounds. Meals can be secured on the grounds at reasonable rates from twenty-five cents up to any price one likes to pay. The Grand Trunk Exhibit of the Forestry, Fish and Game Building is attracting much attention and the consensus of opinion is that it is the finest in the building. The many fine pictures of the fishing, hunting and summer resort districts in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec appeal to the sportsman and tourist and the animated picture machines showing the "International Limited" and scenic pictures of different sections of the line holds the attention of visitors, bringing Canada prominently before the people of the American continent.

Those who desire to keep in touch with the world's progress and who wish to spend a most pleasant and profitable time should not fail to see the largest and most comprehensive Exposition that has ever been known as a "World's Fair" and now is the time to go. The Grand Trunk have also installed exhibits at the Eastern Canada Exposition held at Sherbrooke, Que., at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and the Western Pennsylvania Exposition, Pittsburg, Pa., all now taking place. The Western Pennsylvania Exposition is one of the largest annual fairs held in the United States and lasts 46 days. The space occupied by the Grand Trunk is 3,000 feet and it is estimated that not less than half a million people will visit the display.

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Interesting Gossip About Some Prominent People.

The Amer of Afghanistan was very dull at book-learning when he was a boy, but had a natural gift for engineering and handicrafts; in fact, he became an expert blacksmith, as he thought a Prince ought to have a trade to fall back upon just as much as any of his subjects. Sarasate, the great violinist, was once asked the secret of his success. "Six hours' practice a day since I was twelve," was his reply; which means that he has fiddled for 100,000 hours since his early boyhood. However, this constant practice has resulted in not only fame but fortune, for he makes something like $50,000 a year.

The oldest civil and mechanical engineer in the world who is still actively engaged in practicing his profession is Mr. Charles Haynes Haswell. At the advanced age of ninety-five years Mr. Haswell continues regular work, very rarely missing a day from his desk in the engineering bureau of the Board of Estimate and Appointment of New York City. Mr. Lyman Gage, the American millionaire, rose from being assistant in a village post-office. He is a great believer in rich men helping promising young lads, instead of founding huge buildings. Mr. Gage considers that the progress of the world is helped on much more by assisting a boy to finish his education at college than by spending money in bricks and mortar.

Daniel Vierge, who died recently in Paris and who was known as "the father of modern illustration," was a Spaniard by birth. At the eightieth birthday celebration of Victor Hugo he was stricken with paralysis which rendered his right side powerless, but with rare courage and perseverance he trained his left hand and continued to the end to be at the head and front of modern illustrations.

M. Combes, the French Premier, is a doctor by profession, and still retains his old copper nameplate "Docteur Combes" on the front door of his house at Pons. Occasionally his medical services are asked by his old townspeople, and he says he experiences more satisfaction in relieving their pain than in winning a political victory. His chief recreation in Paris is said to be the study of foreign languages. He is also very fond of cycling—a pastime, however, which he only engages in when staying in the country.

The Sultan of Turkey cannot have a particularly happy life. He is so afraid of poison that every dish and drinking vessel is covered with a cloth and sealed. At any moment he may command one of his attendants to taste some portion, and a number of unfortunate pet animals are kept constantly at hand for the same purpose. He is fond of reading exciting, sensational novels, is a good shot with rifle and pistol, plays the piano, and constantly has concerts, plays, and cinematograph performances to while away his lonely and unhappy hours.

Sir John Jackson, who was not successful in winning the seat at Devonport, England, has probably built more docks than any other contractor in the world. He is fifty-two, and a Yorkshireman; began his engineering career in the Tyneside shops, and undertook his first contract at the early age of twenty-four. This was at Newcastle, and the work was so well done that young Jackson made a bid for the Glasgow. He was then twenty-five, and the work took three years. When it was finished his name was made, and thenceforward dock and harbor construction became the work of his life. Genial, unaffected, and immensely rich, he is one of the most broad-minded of men; and it speaks well of him that, though he rarely has fewer than 5,000 men at work for him, he has never had a strike.

When King Edward was a little boy, a party of Ojibwa Indians, who were given an audience by Queen Victoria, caused him much amusement, and he ran about among them, pulling at their fringed leggings and examining their trappings without the slightest fear. One of the chiefs delighted him hugely by presenting him with an eagle's feather and a bear's claw, and also made the little Prince a pretty speech, describing him in true Red Indian fashion as "the very big little White Father whose eyes are like the sky that sees all things, and who is fat with goodness like a winter bear."

Sir Frederick Holder, Speaker of the House of Representatives, preached twice in the Methodist Church, Golden Square, Bondi, last Sunday. This item of news, extracted from the latest Melbourne papers, may sound a little strange at this side of the world, but such announcements have long been familiar to Australian readers. Sir Frederick was a Wesleyan preacher for many years in South Australia, of which colony he was Premier when Federation was accomplished. He was elected the first Speaker of the Commonwealth Parliament, and instead of resting on Sundays, like every other Speaker, he finds his way by force of habit into some Methodist pulpit.

NEARLY $8,000,000.00

The Accumulated Funds in the Treasury of the Independent Order of Foresters on the 1st of August, 1904, stands at $7,815,556.02. On the 1st of September they stand at $7,909,086.49. Showing an increase for month of September of $93,530.47. This is a most satisfactory result for the month.

At the end of October the Supreme Executive anticipates that the accumulated funds will be very nearly the round $8,000,000.00. Members of the I.O.F. may in confidence recommend the order to their friends since it is gathering a financial strength such as no other Society has.

Some quite new and simple garments for babies have just been invented. They are in the shape of bags, open down the shoulders and sleeves, and are fastened with small, unobtrusive buttons. To dress the baby, the garments are arranged in place, one over the other, the front portions turned down, and the baby laid in—or on—them. Then the front portions are turned to place, and his small kingship buttoned into full and complete garbing. The child is fresh, unweary, unincumbered by much handling and turning, the little limbs are free to stretch, kick, twist, turn and grow as they will.
