

... always a make when travel was broken into broad roads... useless to try to estimate... passed within a few miles... of the caribou is the most... thing that I have ever seen in... of many expeditions among the... of America. The buffalo were for... part killed out before my time... understanding all the tall stories... of their numbers, I cannot believe... the heads on the prairie over surpa... size La Foule of the caribou."

... "We saw an animal, apparently at some distance, bounding along the horizon at a most remarkable pace; all down the line there were cries of 'Erejer (musk-ox), Ethen Le Leop! Guns were snatched from the sleighs, and even the dogs charged at a gallop in pursuit of the strange animal. After a rush of ten yards the quarry disappeared; the first man put his foot on it, and it turned out to be one of the small mice so common in the Barren Ground."

... The northern limit of the previous expedition was passed without finding musk-ox, and once more Mr. Pike and his men were entirely without food, and the sleigh dogs were with difficulty kept from eating made it impossible to see game if there were any, but once more, at the critical moment, the air cleared, and a large band of musk-ox was discovered. This was approximately in Lat. 66° N., Long. 110° W. Except for the value of its skin for robes, this remote-dwelling animal does not seem of particular interest or worth, and regarded as sport of the moment, apart from the difficulty of reaching their habitat, is mere slaughter. After another perilous journey Mr. Pike once more reached Fort Resolution by the middle of December, and there spent the winter and spring, making only short hunting excursions, which we need not describe. On May 7, 1890, he again struck out for the North, but this time took a more westerly course, and from Lake Aylmer crossed the portage to descend at the Peace River to the Rocky Mountains, and having got through the gap in them, to still ascend the river southward, until, in the neighborhood of Macleod's Lake, he could cross to Quenesnelle, on the edge of the Cariboo Gold Fields of British Columbia.

... Starting on August 25, Hudson's Hope, at the entrance of the gorge of the Rockies, was attained on October 27. It was pressed upon Mr. Pike not to risk being caught by winter on a canoe journey in the wilds west of the main range. But he determined to push on, instead of waiting till frost and snow should make a journey on snow-shoes a comparatively easy matter of eight or ten days. His companions were Murdo, from Fort Resolution; John, a respectable Englishman, picked up in the course of the journey up the Peace River; Charlie, a half-breed; and Pat, a Siconean. The last three professed to know the route, and Charlie and Pat had just made it and were returning. The nothing, and the others had no experience of the route, and had no other means of reaching the mountains. The boat was a canoe, hollowed out of a cotton-wood log. Above Hudson's Hope is a twelve mile portage to avoid a rapid. At the far end of it is the last habitation—a trader's cabin. A cold nip delayed the start, and it was November 26 before they fairly got away. Three days later they began to reach the mountains, and they managed to reach the confluence of the Findlay and Parsnip, but next morning revealed both streams blocked. To reach Macleod Lake they had to ascend alongside the Parsnip, and presently branch to the west up a tributary. Fort Macleod is a safe haven for them, and Charlie and Pat said five days at most would find them there. Leaving impediments including a thirty pounds of flour and their gun, carrying a blanket and a small load of provisions, kettles, &c. John was always lagging behind, so that progress was not as fast as it might have been. After being four nights out, they reckoned on pushing the next day to Fort Macleod, and so left most of the things they were carrying to be fetched presently by a sleigh. All food had now been eaten. The fifth day passed and the tributary stream had not been found. The next day they found it as they thought and followed it up but did not reach the fort. The day after they disappeared, and it was the wrong stream. There was nothing for it but to try and return. Happily in a deserted mine's shaft they had with them a bit of dried moose-skin for mending moccasins. "Labrador Tea" was found growing in the woods. The skin was their only possible food, so each ate a stewed strip three inches by one. A good fire and a pipe heartened them a little. It was now December 10. That night they reached the Parsnip, but next day a map they would have known that forty miles only separated them from Fort Macleod. As it was life hung on their getting back to their bag of flour. On the tenth day (December 17), without food except the scraps of moose-skin, they again reached to their scaffold. The flour would ordinarily have served five men for two days. It and what a few cartridges might provide must be made to last them four days. With a good fortune they might reach the trader's cabin in three or four days. But they were really too weak to succeed in such a feat. The snow proved deep. On the third day a blizzard made travel impossible. The daily rations were reduced to two cupsful of flour between the five men. On December 24 another blizzard stopped them, and the meals consisted of a spoonful of flour each in the morning, and a strip of moose-skin at night. It was not till the 27th that they very near the point of death, they reached Fort Barrow's cabin.

... This terrible journey, as simply told in detail by Mr. Pike, is amongst the most thrilling episodes of modern adventure. His book must be read in order to realize what an English gentleman can go through and yet survive to write his story. One caution he gives which must not be mentioned. The vaunted lands of the Peace River are not fit for emigrants.

A GLENGARRY MIRACLE.

Mr. James Sands' Wonderful Restoration to Health.

After Three Years of Paralysis, Incapacity, and Helplessness, He Tells the Tale of His Recovery and Renewed Work in the West—His Story as Told in a Free Press Reporter.

OTTAWA FREE PRESS.

The town of Alexandria, some 55 miles south of the city of Ottawa, on the Canadian Atlantic Railway, has been completely astonished, recently, at the marvellous experience of a young man, who, after having been bed-ridden for nearly twelve months, and his case pronounced incurable by Montreal and Alexandria doctors, is now restored to complete health and strength.

Mr. James Sands is a young teamster, well known and extremely popular throughout the country side, and his illness and wonderful recovery have been—indeed still are—the chief topics in the town and neighborhood. The story of his miraculous cure having reached Ottawa, a member of the Free Press journeyed to Alexandria and sought out Mr. Sands for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of the statements made regarding his recovery. Mr. Sands is a slimly built, but wiry-looking young man of about 32 years of age, and when met by the newspaper man the bloom of health was on his cheek and his whole frame showed signs of unimpaired vigor and vitality.

The newspaper man told Mr. Sands the object of his visit, and the latter expressed his perfect willingness to give all the facts connected with his case. "I was," said Mr. Sands, "a complete wreck, given up by the doctors, but now I am well and strong again, and gaining strength every day. I was born in Lancaster in 1860, and up to three years ago I was always healthy and strong, living in the open air and being well known throughout the whole county of Glengarry. It was in the winter of 1888-89 that I first felt signs of incipient paralysis. I was then teamster for the sash and door factory here, and had been exposed to all kinds of weather. I then experienced violent twisting cramps in my right hand. I was in a state of mental distress for three days before I knew anybody there for three days before I was called in but could do nothing for me. After that I came home and appeared to get all right for a time, but after a few days the old trouble began again my hand continuing the twitching and cramping that had preceded the stroke. Up to twelve months ago my symptoms were as follows. Then in August, 1891, when I was in Huntington village I sustained a second stroke, and remained unconscious for about seven hours. A doctor attended me and I recovered sufficiently to be brought home. After my return home the paralysis steadily righted on me, and I lost the use of my right arm and leg entirely; my right eye was distorted and my tongue partially paralyzed. I was prescribed by an Alexandria physician, whose treatment I was followed, but it had no effect. I still grew steadily worse, and about a month before Christmas last, I went to the English hospital at Montreal. Prof. Stuart and all the other doctors came around me, as mine was a curious case, and the professor treated me. All the doctors could give me no satisfaction, and did not appear to understand my case. I questioned some of them, but they told me it was a hopeless case. I remained in the hospital a month, without the least improvement, and was then brought home, and remained in my bed till May day. I had consulted medical advice, but continued to grow weaker and worse. My right arm and leg I grew so weak and useless that I could not turn myself in bed. Neatness I had tried all sorts of patent medicines without the least effect. In May I saw an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the papers, and said I would try them as a last resort. I had heard of the wonderful cures worked by Pink Pills, and told my folks to get me some. I had not taken them long when I found myself improving, and this determined me to continue their use. My strength gradually returned, the muscles of my arm and leg became invigorated and stronger, and I was able to sit up. I still continued taking the Pills and gaining strength, until at last I was able to get about, and finally to return to my old place at the sash and door factory. I got up the Pills for a while, but did not feel well, so I again began their use. I now feel well as ever, though perhaps not quite so strong as formerly. You can see my right arm, which was withered, is now all right," and Mr. Sands stretched out a muscular limb, which in reply to the reporter had been brought on completely satisfied, "said he, "that it is entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I owe my wonderful restoration. Besides the medical treatment I had tried electricity and patent medicines, both internal and external, but without the slightest avail. After beginning Pink Pills I began to mend, and they have made a new man of me."

The newspaper man then called on Messrs. Ostrom Bros. & Co., widely known druggists, and interviewed their representative, Mr. Smith, as to his knowledge of the case. Mr. Smith was fully conversant with the facts, and vouched for the story told by Mr. Sands, and further said, that his hopeless case and remarkable recovery are known throughout Glengarry County. In reply to the query if many of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold, Mr. Smith replied that the sale was remarkable and that in his experience he had never handled a remedy that sold so well, or gave such general satisfying reports as are heard of the excellent results following their use. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense that word is understood. They are the result of years of experience and careful investigation. They are not a purgative medicine, but act directly upon the blood and nerves, supplying those constituents required to enrich the former and stimulate and restore the latter.

For all diseases depending upon a vitiated condition of the blood, or shattered nerves, they are an unfailing remedy. Such diseases as those speedily yield to their treatment: Locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, nervous prostration, nervous headache, dyspepsia, chronic erysipelas, scrofula, etc. They are a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, correcting irregularities, and restoring the functions, and in the case of men effect a radical cure in all cases arising from overwork, mental worry or excessive any nature. In fact it may be said of them "They come as a boon and a blessing to men. Restoring to health, life and vigor again."

These Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., and (Schenectady, N. Y.), and are sold in boxes (never in loose form) by the dozen or hundred and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, from either address. The price at which these pills are sold make a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

Sir Edwin on Manitoba

Sir Edwin Arnold, who spent a day or two in Winnipeg last week, is enthusiastic regarding the C. P. R. transcontinental route, and delighted with Manitoba and the Canadian North-west. He said to a correspondent: "I don't think the Government is generous enough to this country. They should be more liberal in their efforts to populate this land, prolific in possibilities; say, in certainties. They should not send out paupers, but every man should have 50 pounds in his pocket. Manitoba and the North-west should have 20,000,000 of people within the next 15 years. Yes, this is my first trip through the west. I have never been west of Toronto before. I have never seen your great wheat areas now and am astonished."

Pilgrims to Mecca.

Some idea of the volume of those who go the pilgrimage to Mecca is obtained from the last report of the British Consul at Jeddah, from which it appears that during the past year 46,953 pilgrims, bound for Mecca, British Indians, 10,317 were Japanese, 6285 Egyptians, 3554 Moors and Algerians, 3285 Turks and Persians, 2986 Arabs, 1857 from Yemen, 1717 Syrians, 1643 Bokharians, while the nationalities of the remainder are not specified. The total number in 1890 was larger by a few hundreds.
