Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason.
HOT DAY REFLECTIONS.
Somewhere a HEYD is digging pathways through the snow, and handing out the language weed, while pulling icebergs from his beard. His feet are frozen in his shoes, and he has chilblains in his thighs, his breath is freezing as it flies, and icicles are on his eyes. Alas, his fate is dark and grim, I shed some lightning tears for him. Could he forsake the arctic storm, and come down here where he'd get warm, how glad and grateful he would be. If he would, chortle in his glee. Somewhere, on grim Spitzbergen's shore, the natives throb out nevemore. They know not what it is to sweat, rheumatics is their one suite bet. If they go out to get some food, their ears are frozen up, for good, and presently they're unawares assaulted by some polar bears, and eaten cold, without a sauce to make them less a total loss. Their wives and organs stand by to seek the fragments in the snow, and meet a frightful fate, methinks; they're sobbed by a wolf or lynx. How glad and grateful he would be, if he could, to get some food, and presently they're unawares assaulted by some polar bears, and eaten cold, without a sauce to make them less a total loss. Their wives and organs stand by to seek the fragments in the snow, and meet a frightful fate, methinks; they're sobbed by a wolf or lynx. How glad and grateful he would be, if he could, to get some food, and presently they're unawares assaulted by some polar bears, and eaten cold, without a sauce to make them less a total loss.
