Lightning.

BY H. L. RANN.

Lightning for. For one thing, it has given us that most affable and tenacious emblem of industry, the lightning rod agent, who goes along life's rugged path scattering puncture-proof barns and promissory notes. Then again lightning, when properly directed, enables a great many people to collect in fire insurance to twice the value of the insured. The milch cow is a shining mark for lightning, which corners her next to a barbed wire fence and renders her into porterhouse steak at a very fair rate of speed. Men who have studied the habits of lightning say that if anyone wishes to find out what it feels like to be cauterized from the chin down he should stand in an open doorway and allow a few thunderbolts to bounce off his person. Lightning is generally preceded by a clap of thunder which can be heard with the naked eye, after which there is a brief period of calm and then a sound as if somebody was repairing the roof with a pile-driver. Sheet lightning is a panoramic variety which causes timid people to sit up in bed and discuss eternal truths which do not annoy them in the daytime. A display of chain lightning, which sticks its head in at the window and runs out a forked tongue, can induce a man to change his mode of life quicker than a protracted meeting.

No More Paring on 50,000,000 Corns

Some time ago a chemist discovered how to completely end a corn. He made a wax—the B & B wax—which forms the heart of a Blue-jay plaster. This little plaster has since then removed fifty million corns. It is applied in a jiffy, and the corn pain ends at once. Then the B & B wax gently loosens the corn. In 48 hours the whole corn comes out, root and all. No soreness, no discomfort. You feel nothing at all. People who pare corns get just a few days' relief. To get it they run the constant risk of infection. The millions who use Blue-jay never suffer or wait. They get rid of the corn in two days. Get Blue-jay and prove it, as they did.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn. B protects the corn, stopping the pain at once. C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable. D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Oil Well Gushes Ten Thousand Barrels.

That is the Daily Flow From a Hole in the Ground in the Field Near Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 10.—What is believed to be the biggest gusher ever tapped south of Los Angeles is flowing at the rate of ten thousand barrels a day. The gas pressure, which was very heavy when the well came in, forced the tools out of the hole and scattered them, and then, with a terrific roar, the oil came shooting out, knocking parts of the derrick down and scattering heavy timbers in every direction.

The gusher was tugged at a depth of less than 1,400 feet; the drill entering what was believed to be a stray fountain at about 1,300 feet less than ten days ago. A heavy gas pressure developed and the drilling crews prepared for emergency in case the stray formation developed anything out of the ordinary. To bring in a gusher at less than 1,400 feet is something entirely new in the Fullerton field.

The oil that first came out was estimated to be about twenty-five degrees gravity and of a nature different from that coming from other wells in the field. The volume of gas from the appearance of the tremendous flow of oil supposed to be banked well back in the formation.

From last report the gusher was not throwing its oil over the top of the derrick, a contrivance being arranged with heavy timbers to break the pressure of the flow and throw it about rather than straight up. The big well was reached with ten inch casing making it capable of throwing out the great volume of oil without weakening the casing, but while the well shows no indications of sanding up it is said that such is probable.

Sir George White Dead.

London, June 24.—Field Marshal Sir George Stuart White, Governor of Chelsea Hospital, London's Home for Aged Soldiers, and one of the most distinguished soldiers in the British army, died today, in his seventy-seventh year.

Sir George White, who was an Irishman, having been born in County Antrim in 1835, passed through a strenuous life as a soldier, fighting Britain's battles in all parts of the world. He went through the terrible hardships of the Indian Mutiny in 1857 as a young officer, taking part in many engagements with the Sepoys. It was, however, during the Afghan War in 1879-80 that he had his fame and won the rare distinction of the Victoria Cross "For valor." At the battle of Charasman, he led two companies of his regiment the Gordon Highlanders up a steep mountain to attack the strongly posted Afghan fanatics. When his men halted, exhausted, he seized a rifle, advanced alone, and shot the Afghan General dead. He accompanied Lord Roberts on his march to Kandahar and he in charge rode straight up to the muzzle of the Afghan cannon, captured one with his own hands and assured the British victory. He afterwards participated in the Soudan expedition in 1885 for the relief of General Gordon, and the same year in the Burmese war. In 1897, when he was Commander-in-Chief in Natal, he defeated Ladysmith against the Boer besiegers for 199 days. After the Boer war he was appointed Governor of the Fortress of Gibraltar.

Eagles in Combat

An old time observer in Maryland says that the Eastern Shore eagles can fly faster, remain in their lofty flight longer and descend from it to the earth with more velocity than any other created thing with wings. He also says that the fierceness of the eagles and the tenacity and power of clutch they can put into their immense talons are beyond belief, and he cites as an instance of it a fight between two of the big birds that he once saw.

Just what incited the two eagles to the combat this spectator of the fight did not know, but they came together high in the air. A long time the two fierce birds fought with beak and talon and wing, rushing upon one another, delivering their blows and retreating for advantage in a new attack. Then at last they clinched and fought at close quarters. In that position they came plunging to the earth, but neither made any effort to stay the fall, so desperately intent was each on the savage battle. They struck together in the freshly turned furrow of a plowed field, and the impact failed to separate them or to cause an instant's delay in the fight, and the coming on the scene of a man with a club with which he at once struck their attention from one another, and the man killed them both. Their talons were buried so deeply in each other's flesh that to separate the two belligerent eagles it was necessary to cut off their legs.—New York Sun.

Human Nature.

George Washington, in snowy dress, was seated on a star, and gazed, with symptoms of distress, upon the Earth afar. Beside him sat King George the Third, his sceptre in his hand. "said Washington to him: 'My word! I view my native land, and scarcely recognize the place; the changes make me sad; there is a presidential race, and everyone seems mad! Besides our native Presidents, as Presidents should be, your kings would seem like twenty cents for power and dignity. The office, as it was designed, the greatest was on earth, for men of high, majestic mind, of substance and of worth. But they've degraded it so much, made it so cheap a thing, that fakers for it claw and clutch like monkeys in a ring. The candidates go forth and rant, and pull a thousand wires, implore and threaten, sweat and pant, and call each other liars. Each tells of what the other did—disgraceful, sordid things; 'you stole some candy from a kid,' 'you noisy statesman sings; and then the other one replies, with wild and frantic whoop: 'You stole a blind man's china eyes, and robbed a chicken-coop.' It grieves me that my native land should be disgraced, by jings! I almost wish we hadn't named you and your line of kings!' King George looked down a billion miles on this fat land below, and sprang one of his greasy smiles, and sighed: 'I told you so!'

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, June 28. A general campaign of destruction of post offices throughout the country has been inaugurated by suffragettes. They smashed the windows of the office at Manchester, and broke those of the Reform Club there. The London branch office and those at Hitchin and Letchworth were similarly treated. A number of women were arrested and announced their intention to smash the windows of every post office in England. Premier Asquith was again assaulted at a reception, when an unknown woman seized him by the lapels of his coat and shook him, till breathless. Two men caught her and hurled her down the stairs. The struggle was so violent that her sleeve was torn out, her watch was broken, and she lost a diamond brooch.
