Terrible Railroad Smash

Head-on Collision Staged for the Movies Scene Cost Thousands of Dollars For Few Feet of Film.

Some people say that the movies are purely mechanical and that they get few thrills out of big scenes shown in pictures. Those folks have some thing coming when they see the terrific head-on smash between two giant locomotives that takes place in the jail delivery scene in "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight" which es to the Nickel Theatre on Monday. The scene calls for a huge locomotive running wild and on which a prison warden is fighting with several escaped convicts. The director, knowing that such a scene would not make anything ext: aordinary, resolved to stage a real smash-up. Forthwith two big locomotives were purchased and a track built on the city limit freight yards.

The track was about a half mile long. The engines were placed at either end, and, with a full head of steam, were set loose with throttles open. With the roar of the escaping steam, and the exhausts puffing like mad, these two leviathans dashed headlong at each other like a couple of mad bulldogs. They met in about the centre of the span of tracks and crashed together with a deafening rear and an explosion that rent them into a thousand pieces.

Thrilling doesn't describe the scene. It must be witnessed on the screen to be fully appreciated. It is unquestionably one of the greatest head-on collisions ever staged in pictures and cost upwards of $12,000 for this one shot alone.
