Proves To Be Unpopular, However-Municipal Matters Discussed at Collins' Hall.

A meeting of the electors of West night, and for several hours the people listened to the discussion of munipected that it would be decidedly Conservative in its leanings, but before the meeting was over it developed that the most popular man before the people was ex-Ald. Campbell, who had been invited by Mr. Judd to be present. All the speakers with the exception of Mayor Beck, were given attentive hearings, but his worship's bitter speech and his somewhat coarse references to Dr. Campbell's ability did not take well, and there was an uproar during his period on the platform.

The mayor was brought to West London to assist Mr. Judd, whose chances of election owing to his corporation connections are very slim, but if the reception accorded his worship can be taken as a criterion, then Mr. Judd had better stump it alone henceforth. Certainly, Mr. Beck did not help him any last night by his personal attack on Dr. Campbell, for the doctor was treated with the utmost deference and respect by the people of West London.

Mr. Levi Hammond made a most satisfactory chairman.

Ald. Judd.

Ald, Judd, in opening his speech, said he hoped another "ex" would be added to Ex-Ald. Campbell's long list—this time, ex-candidate for mayor, He said he didn't think anything very bad could be said of either Dr. Campbell or himself, But as Dr. Campbell claimed he has had 24 years' municipal experience he did not think it was creditable to his ability that it took him all these years to qualify himself for the mayor's chair. Going into the overdrafts of this year's council, the speaker declared that after the civic uncontrollable expenditures are provided for, the aldermen have not much money to spend, and if they have an overdraft they are wing to the fact that the com had not put in large enough estimates at the beginning of the year. Ald, Judd said that because he had acted for the city and not for the Bell Telephone Company, the city of London is $1,500 a year to the good, as instead of paying $1,000 a year for a franchise, the company, by the agreement which Mr. Judd claims he alone made, has to pay the city now $2,500 a year. Why didn't The Advertiser use this argument against him two years ago, as he has been a stockholder in the company since 1903? Simply because The Advertiser is trying to make political capital against him. He also declared he is a friend of the labor unions, and is being attacked by the Echo on this account. ### Deceiving the People.

Referring to the overdraft of the council, Dr. Campbell said that unfortunately there is a desire amongst the London was held in Collins' Hall last aldermen to pose as economical, no matter what their expenditures may be, and as a consequence it sometimes follows that they cut their estimates cipal matters. The meeting had been below what is necessary to run the called by Ald. Judd, and it was ex- city, in order to keep down the tax This is what happened this year's council, and as a whole the civic bodies stand to face an overdraft of somewhere between $8,000 and $10,000. And this action of the council can only be characterized as a deliberate attempt to deceive the people-to make them believe the tax rate was low, when, as a matter of fact, the expenditures of the council warranted an increase in tax rate.

Turning to Ald. Judd's statements regarding the street railway company, the speaker said that to judge by Ald.

Judd's remarks, he (Campbell) must

Of the increasing have been a very powerful man in the council of 1902. As to the tearing up of the Rectory street line, he explained that at the time all the members of the council, including Mayor Beck, thought the agreement with the company the best that could be made, though the council did not like the idea of abandoning the Rectory street line. In all the negotiations, he had no more to do with the agreement than had any other alderman. He had The mayor, who was sitting in the nothing to do with the company beyond riding on its cars, and this he did not do when the strike was on. Afterwards and had changed its mind on the Rectory street line, and this change of mind had not taken place just before the election, as Ald. Judd had insinuated, but had occurred in the summer time before Mayor Beck left on a trip to the old country.

Competition Did It.

Of the Bell Telephone argument, for which Ald. Judd takes so much credit to himself, Dr. Campbell said it possibly has not occurred to Ald. Judd that the talk of a new company in the field had had much to do with the increase in the amount paid by the Bell people for a franchise in London.

The speaker characterized Ald. Judd's vigorous denunciation of the papers to divert attention from the real issue. Ald, Judd's personal honesty had not been impugned. The papers were simply pointing out that Ald. Judd has interests which may conflict with the interests of the city if he is elected mayor. # WARNS BRITAIN

Hold Our Own.

London, Dec. 29 .- "The army as it was and as it is to be," is the text under which Field Marshall Earl Roberts, in the January Nineteenth Century, reads Britons a noteworthy lecture on the duties of all classes if Great Britain would meet the demands of modern warfare. After frankly pointing out existing deficiencies, Earl Roberts writes:

"A terrible lesson awaits the nation whose soldiers find themselves opposed by equally brave but better trained op-ponents on the field of battle. No amount of money, no national sacrifices, will then avail, for modern warfare moves fast, and time lost in peace can never be fast, and time lost in peace can never be made up during the stress of a campaign. I hold this view very strongly, and would urge my fellow-countrymen, with all the force at my command, to look the plain facts in the face."

Earl Roberts does not advocate compulsory service, "because it is distasteful to the nation and incompatible with the conditions of an army, which has a large proportion of units in foreign service," but maintains that Great Britain must have a large reserve force, and "if must have a large reserve force, and "it the citizens of so great and prosperous a nation as ours are to remain exempt from compulsory service in time of peace, with-out the safety of the empire being en-dangered, the right class of men must be attracted to the regular army by good conditions of pay and pension, and it is the bounden duty of the state to see that every able-bodied man in this country Earl Roberts interestingly reviews the changes of the last 50 years, describe powers of leading must be on a proportionately higher level.

"The sooner this is realized to the fullest extent," Earl Roberts says, "the better for all ranks when the hour of trial comes."
Earl Roberts says the report of the commission on the war in South Africa made it clear that much is still needed before Great Britain has an army fit in before Great Britain has an army fit in all respects for war with a modern for-eign power. Among other things, she must have a larger proportion of mount-ed troops for rapid reinforcement, and in order to quickly seize points of vantage. He refers to the action of the Go ernment in ordering new quick-firing field guns for the complete re-equipment of the army, and says guns will be 124 pounders for horse and 184-pounders for ield artillery.
