They are splendidly made, being as near perfect as tailoring skill can make them, and at this price, which we can safely say is less than any tailor would charge for making a suit (and few could make them as well) they are certainly wonderful value.

VOL. L. NO. 214

LIFE A FAILURE, HE RESIGNED

Mystery Surrounds the Suicide of an Unknown German Yesterday

"Do not blame me for the course I have taken, as life is a total failure as far as I am concerned. It will be useless to find out who I am." This message, a six-ounce envelope containing carbolic acid, and a letter in which a quantity of the deadly fluid still remained, resting on a washstand in room 41, Queen's Hotel, and his dead body lying on the nearby, testified in all too plain a manner that the suicide's determination to take his own life had been fulfilled. The police authorities are now confronted with the task of finding the identity of the man who resorted to the Queen's hotel on Sunday night, occupied a room on Monday Tuesday night at the same hotel, and whose dead body was discovered yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. A Japanese attendant when he went to do up the room at that hour. On the hotel register is inscribed the name "Albert Ehmman, Westster" written there by the man who arrived at the hotel about 10 o'clock on Sunday evening. This is not the deceased's real name, as is plain from the tenor of the note by the suicide and the fact that effort had been made by him to fully erase the name inscribed on the front of his pocketbook and that ten in the inside of his hat band sides which were on destroyed. A number of letters and papers yesterday morning, it is apparent that the name is merely a blind. The crossing of the names had done with black ink, which had been rubbed in with his hand while the name on the inside of the hat band is wholly indistinct. On the cover of the pocketbook was not so thoroughly stated and by means of a magnifying glass a name was faintly discernible as either "H. Gotterlich" or "E. Gotterlich." On the back of one of the photographs in the pocketbook is inscribed a name which is not clearly legible. This is the only woman in the world for me—H. G.

No Clue to Suicide
 Every effort was made by Det. Thomas Palmer yesterday afternoon to secure some clue to the real identity of the suicide. The clothes were examined for marks, the inside of a memorandum tablet as well as without result, so well he unknown erased all signs. Whence he came and what led to take his life are mysteries which may never be solved. Albert Ehmman, to give his name by which he registered, at the Queen's hotel on Sunday night. From the hour of his arrival the fact that he resided at the hotel, William Baylis, proprietor of the hotel, believes that the man was a German. He had paid fifty cents for his room and sat around the smoking room the evening, retiring to bed about 1 o'clock. On Monday he spent the about the city frequently dropping the hotel and in the evening about until nearly midnight when again went to bed, again paying cents for his room. Tuesday morning he was followed and in the afternoon after chatting for two or three hours with some of the hotel staff, he returned to his room at 11 o'clock he paid for the bar, paid five cents for a glass of beer and proceeded to his room. The money spent for the was the last cent the man had yesterday afternoon and the effort the man searched, not a cent found.

Of German Birth.
 During his stay about the he appeared in good spirits. It is plain from his account that he was a German, but he English fluently, appeared to be a man of education, and he courteous and had a fund of which he told to the hotel pe well as to some of the hotel house. On Tuesday night, he alive, he appeared to be in excellent good spirits though he must have had in his pocket the carbolic acid with which he took his own life and had come determination to end all. After trying he was not seen again yesterday afternoon when his body was found by F. Baylis, clerk on duty, and taken away morgue.

The fact that Ehmman did not up in the morning was not and in fact it was not until 3.30 o'clock that the Japanese called at the room to do it up door was locked. When no body was received to the room, the Japanese informed the officer Baylis opened the door by means of a pass key and discovered the dead body resting under the clothes in such a natural manner that at first the clerk believed to be asleep but shaking the body closed the fact that life was departed. The man and shoes were fully disposed of them in a bucket, both of the texture, were crossed on his breast in a natural manner, his head resting on the left side. The Japanese found the bottle of acid and a which the unknown had taken from the hotel. The bottle was empty, and there was some fluid in the tumbler. The man must have undressed, hung clothes and drinking nearly contents of the tumbler had been, pulling up the bedclothes, and a slight drawing up of there was nothing to indicate he had endured great pain. His lips were burned and blackened by the strong acid.

Photographs Found
 The police were summoned Constable Blackstock, and Constable Macdonald arrived in a wagon and the body was taken
